Flyers Escape Without Injury But Ship Damaged On Landing—Flyers Were In Air Thirty Four Hours Is Report.

By International News Service
The North Atlantic Ocean has at last been spanned in a westward flight.

The monoplane Bremen is at Greenely Island, seven miles off the coast of Labrador, after a thirty-four hour flight during which it battled against sleet, snow, rain and headwinds. Captain Koehl, Commandant Fitzmaurice and Baron Von Huenefeld are safe but they are marooned on an ice-bound island.

The Bremen was forced to alight because it ran out of fuel. In landing the plane's propeller was smashed and its landing gear was damaged.

RESCUE SHIP SENT
The Canadian government has ordered the ice-breaker Montcalm to proceed to Greenely Island to rescue the flyers. The Montcalm is now on its way.

Greenely Island is in the straits of Belle Isle which are frozen over. News of the flyers' landing was brought to Point Amour, Labrador, by dog sled where there is a wireless station.

The straits of Belle Isle separate Labrador from Newfoundland. The surrounding country is bleak. There is a fishing station on Greenely Island which is plentifully supplied with food.

Canadian government officials are sending a plane to Greenely. They say the attempt would be too hazardous and a landing might be impossible.

Succumbs Suddenly During Speech Before Teachers

COLUMBUS, O., April 14.—O. T. Corson, 69, former state director of education of Ohio, dropped dead here today, while speaking from the stage of the Ohio State University chapel to attendants to the state educational conference here.

He had opened the morning session of the program at the chapel with an address: "Ohio Legislation and Its Relation to the Teaching Profession."

He had been speaking approximately four minutes when he was seen to suddenly grasp at a nearby table. Listeners hurried to his side as he slumped to the floor. When a university physician arrived he pronounced death due to a heart attack.

Corson had been state commissioner of common schools from 1892 to 1898, and was a former president of the State Teachers' Association.

He had been school superintendent at Camden, Cambridge and Granville.

He was a trustee of Ohio State University for fourteen years. He was born May 1, 1858.

Strong northwest winds are driving the cold which now grips Michigan over Ohio and West Virginia.

BARON HUENEFELD JAMES FITZMAURICE CAPT. HERMAN KOEHL

The above picture lay-out shows the three intrepid flyers, the transatlantic Junkers plane "Bremen" which they used on the first successful westward flight, and the route they hoped to follow from Dublin, Ireland, to Mitchell Field, N. Y. Forced from their planned course, the plane was blown northward so that it landed on Greenely Island, a tiny ice-bound spot of land in the straits of Belle Isle, just south of Labrador. The route map above does not extend far enough north to show the spot where the plane landed and was damaged. All three flyers are reported unhurt.

SECRETARY MELLON TO RETIRE FROM CABINET AT END OF TERM

WASHINGTON, April 14.—Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon has revealed to confidants that he will retire from public life at the end of his present cabinet term next March—irrespective of anything that may happen politically in November. He is tired and wants a rest.

Mellon has confided to close friends his desire to get away from the actual conduct of public affairs. Reports have persisted that he would not accept the treasury post should the Republicans remain in power, but authoritative information concerning his attitude heretofore has been guarded closely.

There is no probability, however, that Mellon will fade out of the foreground in the Republican political picture. Only a few weeks ago he said that foremost in his mind was the Republican national convention at Kansas City.

"What are your plans for the summer?" Mellon was asked.

"The Kansas City convention—after that I have no definite plans," Mellon replied.

Berlin Rejoices In Safety Of Crew; Capital Pleased

NEW YORK, April 14.—National interest was focused today upon the spectacular flight of the German monoplane Bremen. There was nationwide rejoicing over the safe termination of the daring flight, even if the airman were not able to maintain their course to their planned destination—Mitchell Field.

Not only aviation enthusiasts, but leaders in other branches of public activities, expressed elation that Capt. Herman Koehl and his two companions were safe. After darkness had fallen last night and the numerous reports of the Bremen being sighted had proved groundless, hope had begun to dwindle rapidly.

A great reception is being planned for Capt. Koehl, Baron Von Huenefeld and Commandant James E. Fitzmaurice, of the Free State air forces, when they reach this city. They will be feted and acclaimed with honors due the first aviators who were able to negotiate the westbound voyage over the Atlantic in the face of great peril.

Probably the happiest man in New York today was August J. Koehl, uncle of Pilot Herman Koehl of the Bremen. Prof. Koehl went to Mitchell Field where he was the guest of the mayor's welcoming committee while awaiting the Bremen. Pacing up and down the operations office, Prof. Koehl eagerly scanned every bulletin and devoured every rumor and report.

When the news was flashed that the Bremen had landed on Greenely Island off the Labrador Coast, and that the airman were safe, he exclaimed:

"Thank God."
Prof. Koehl was then driven to his home in this city in the official motor car of the mayor's welcoming committee, where he issued the following statement:

"Capt. Koehl's greatest mission has been fulfilled. I never lost hope for a moment. The hearts of Germany, United States and Ireland have been blended. I always knew the brave men would succeed. We will have a real reception when Capt. Koehl and his courageous Appropriation Of $363,000,000 Nears Enactment.

WASHINGTON, April 14.—With peacetime aviation given greater recognition than ever before, the new $363,000,000 naval appropriations bill nearing enactment in the senate today, featuring a program designed to build up America's naval air forces.

The bill appropriated $18,500,000 for naval aviation including $2,000,000 toward the construction of new dirigible hangars. It further authorized the secretary of the navy to enter contracts for the purchase of 10,000,000 worth of new naval aircraft before July 1, 1935, and set aside a $6,500,000 fund for payments on new planes already ordered.

There was a "string" tied to the dirigible construction program, however, the bill giving the government the right to abandon dirigible construction work if it is determined. After one dirigible is built, tested and accepted by the navy, however, the whole program would then become effective.

The bill also carried $53,500,000 for new construction work on three fast cruisers, already authorized by congress, it carried no appropriations for the new "big navy" bill, which was passed the house but of which the senate has not yet acted. The funds set aside would provide for completion of the three cruisers authorized in 1926.

WEST PLAINS, Mo., April 14.—Thirty-three persons were killed and many others were seriously injured when a terrific gasoline explosion wrecked a crowded dance hall here last night.

Rescuers dragged victims from beneath fiery embers as the walls caved in and mountainous tongues of flame enveloped the debris. Two adjoining buildings were caught in the molten blast and soon were a mass of flames.

Throughout the night firemen battled the fire. Today officially the bodies of thirty-three young men and women were lined up in a morgue while almost as many persons were in hospitals burned seriously.

BUILDINGS RUINED
The business houses destroyed were the Adams building, adjoining the dance hall and garage; a theater, a restaurant, and a commission house. The front and rear walls of the theater building were blown out and the side walls crumbled.

Many relatives of the dead had gone to the theater. They witnessed the fire and some are believed to have lost their lives trying to rescue the unfortunates.

Dale Allen, son of a merchant, was blown across the street from the force of the explosion. Every plate glass window within two blocks of the garage was shattered. The explosion was heard for miles.

DEPUTIES IN CHARGE
A number of citizens, deputized by the sheriff, were keeping order today. Search was being made in the debris for the charred remains of the victims. Residents of surrounding towns were arriving in large numbers to give aid to the stricken families.

One charred body, recovered from the ruins, was recognized as that of a young married woman. Her mother identified it.

Communication with West Plains was seriously hampered as only one telephone line linked the stricken city with the outside world.

Flying his new Ryan brougham monoplane, the lone ace surprised the inhabitants of Williams by gliding down to Weber Field here at 9 o'clock last night. So unprepared was Williams for the young colonel's arrival that the air field was dark and the flyer had to drop a flare before making a perfect landing.

The news spread quickly and crowds rushed to the field only to discover that the flying colonel had eluded them by hastening to a hotel.

When informed of news dispatches reporting the safe arrival of the Junkers transatlantic plane Bremen on Greenely Island, Colonel Lindbergh said:

JUNIOR CLASS PLAY PLEASES AUDIENCE AT SECOND SHOWING

Again "The Goose Hangs High." Score another deserved triumph for the second night's production of the Central High School Junior class play before a capacity audience at Jean B. Elwell Auditorium Friday night.

Everybody in the cast was quite perfect with showy performances conspicuous by their absence, but with particular emphasis on several members whose parts are unforgettable.

The play is absorbing by reason of its sincerity and the great beauty of the atmosphere which Miss Jean B. Elwell, the director, has managed as usual to capture and hold, and of course the acting of the entire cast with such ease that it didn't seem to be acting at all.

There is also some delightful dialogue in the midst of the chaos of a temperamental household. If you must know the play is a very modern story defending the younger generation. Mrs. Bradley, a role taken by Anna Kate Lunsford with a voice that is priceless, greatly disapproves of the sacrifices made by her son and daughter to educate their children. Her rather sarcastic wit supplies much of the humor of the play.

The modern views of the children make even their parents wonder at times if they have failed in their training. A financial loss, which threatens their return to college, puts the children to the test and proves they are not as thoughtless and selfish as they seem. In fact, everyone becomes more and more big-hearted as the third act draws to an end, which is another way of saying self-sacrifice in full measure, pressing down and running over. Not a tear remains unshed not a laugh omitted.

Bernard Ingals, the father, capably enacted by Charles Zell, resigned his position, which had become unbearable. The loss of this position, imperiling the future of the children caused much anxiety to the mother and father. Their grandmother was financially able to continue their education but refused because she considered they had already been spoiled by too much generosity on the part of their parents. In order to help their father the twins cleverly tricked their "granny" into buying an interest in a business employing their father to run it for her.

John Little and Margaret Nevill, as the twins, provide most of the spice and pep with their college ways and slang. The love interest centers about Hugh, the older son (Robert Adair), and Dagmar Carroll (Betty Kingsbury), and how, Dunt ask. Everything ends happily, at cetera.

These disjointed remarks scarcely qualify as a review for they are no more than a memorandum of a fine play.

Between acts the high school orchestra directed by E. G. Whitworth furnished music. Copies of the Junior class issue of the Central High "Review" were also distributed following a talk by Evelyn Patterson, circulation manager for the issue.—P. W. F.

XENIA HATCHERIES LEASE DEPENDS ON ORDER FROM COURT

Whether the Xenia Hatcheries Co., wiped out in a recent fire which destroyed the three-story brick building on Washington St., where the business was conducted, will be permitted to lease the old Xenia Fuse Co. plant on Home Ave., rests with the Clark County Common Pleas Court.

The buildings are owned by The Robbins and Myers Co., Springfield, O., which is in the hands of Receiver Wilbur Myers. The defect concern is controlled by the court, which has under advisement the granting of a lease to the Xenia firm.

Meanwhile the local company is established temporarily in the old fuse factory. If unable to lease the plant, which has been vacant for the last ten years, the company has received an offer from Oliver Belden to erect a one-story, 160 by 60 building for the hatchery, on the site of the former structure razed by fire, which was also owned by him.

Leland Cramer, member of the firm, says the firm has ordered two Peterkin incubators from Gettysburg, O., electrically heated, but is not in a position yet to fill orders. An oil burning incubator was responsible for the recent fire and the electrically operated type is said to reduce the hazard besides furnishing cleaner baby chicks.

The local firm also intends to install a 50,000 capacity brooder.

WIDOW OF VICTIM ASKS WHY

Mrs. R. K. Jones and her children.

By KEEN A. RAFFERTY
HALETHORPE, Md., April 14—Now that the rammed submarine S-4 has been raised from the ocean bed off Plymouth, Mass., and dry-docked at Boston, the words of a woman, regarding submarine disasters, are being listened to attentively.

The woman is Mrs. R. K. Jones, of Halethorpe, widow of Lieutenant-Commander Jones, who went down with the sub.

Eager to Save Lives
"Understand, I'm loyal to the navy," Mrs. Jones warns. "But it does seem to me that lives are wasted."

She has made a concrete proposal for the utilization of the S-4, and of the disaster itself, by the navy, in the study of elimination, as far as possible, of submarine tragedies in the future. Mrs. Jones proposes simply that the craft be gone over thoroughly for the possible discovery of defections that may uncover the weak parts of the S-boats, and for the testing of safety devices and salvage apparatus, including rescue suggestions already made by Commander Ellsborg and Simon Lake, designer of the S-boats.

"Why," she asks, "when submarines operate steadily around Providence, doesn't the navy have pontoons ready for accidents?" "Why make experimental, standardization and test runs in places where weather conditions in the winter make rescue of life impossible, as the naval board of inquiry admits was the case off Provincetown?"

"And if these were restricted waters, how could the accident been unavoidable, as Admiral Hughes said? Why would a destroyer be making eighteen knots in restricted waters?"

Quotes Husband
It is Mrs. Jones' belief that Congress has failed to make sufficient appropriations to keep in proper shape the present navy. She quotes her husband as having said that the S-4 was not in condition for safe diving. She believes that submarines particularly, are not sufficiently known to those not actually in submarine service.

"I still think the navy wonderful," Mrs. Jones declares, "but I do not think the superior officers understand fully the terrible life and terrible danger connected with submarines."

The navy department has taken official cognizance of Mrs. Jones' proposals, but refused to make public answers to them.

Mrs. Jones was Miss Evelyn Bond, daughter of Richard Hewitt Bond, of Baltimore. She met Lieutenant-Commander Jones when he was a midshipman at Annapolis.

JUNIOR CLASS PLAY PLEASES AUDIENCE AT SECOND SHOWING

Again "The Goose Hangs High." Score another triumph for the second night's production of the Central High School junior class play before a capacity audience at Jean B. Elwell Auditorium Friday night.

Everybody in the cast was quite perfect with showy performances, conspicuous by their absence, but with particular emphasis on several members whose parts are unforgettable.

The play is absorbing by reason of its sincerity and the great beauty of the atmosphere which Miss Jean B. Elwell, the director, has managed as usual to capture and hold, and of course the acting of the entire cast with such ease that it didn't seem to be acting at all.

There is also some delightful dialogue in the midst of the chaos of a temperamental household. If you must know the play is a very modern story defending the younger generation. Mrs. Bradley, a role taken by Anna Kate Lunsford with a voice that is priceless, greatly disapproves of the sacrifices made by her son and daughter to educate their children. Her rather sarcastic wit supplies much of the humor of the play.

The modern views of the children make even their parents wonder at times if they have fallen in their training. A financial loss, which threatens their return to college, puts the children to the test and proves they are not as thoughtless and selfish as they seem. In fact, everyone becomes more and more big-hearted as the third act draws to an end, which is another way of saying self-sacrifice in full measure, pressing down and running over. Not a tear remains unshed not a laugh omitted.

Bernard Ingals, the father, capably enacted by Charles Zell, resigned his position, which had become unbearable. The loss of this position, imperiling the future of the children caused much anxiety to the mother and father. Their grandmother was financially able to continue their education but refused because she considered they had already been spoiled by too much generosity on the part of their parents. In order to help their father the twins cleverly tricked their "granny" into buying an interest in a business employing their father to run it for her.

John Little and Margaret Need, as the twins provide most of the spice and pep with their college ways and slang. The love interest centers about Hugh, the older son (Robert Adair), and Dagmar Carroll (Betty Kingsbury), and how, Dunt ask. Everything ends happily, at cetera.

These disjointed remarks scarcely qualify as a review, for they are no more than a memorandum of a fine play.

Between acts the high school orchestra directed by E. G. Whitworth furnished music. Copies of the junior class issue of the Central High "Review" were also distributed following a talk by Evelyn Patterson, circulation manager for the issue.—P. W. F.

XENIA HATCHERIES LEASE DEPENDS ON ORDER FROM COURT

Whether the Xenia Hatcheries Co., wiped out in a recent fire which destroyed the three-story brick building on Washington St., where the business was conducted, will be permitted to lease the old Xenia Fuse Co. plant on Home Ave., rests with the Clark County Common Pleas Court.

The buildings are owned by The Robbins and Myers Co., Springfield, O., which is in the hands of Receiver Wilbur Myers. The defunct concern is controlled by the court, which has under advisement the granting of a lease to the Xenia firm.

Meanwhile the local company is established temporarily in the old fuse factory. If unable to lease the plant, which has been vacant for the last ten years, the company has received an offer from Dwyer Belden to erect a one-story, 160 by 60 building for the hatchery, on the site of the former structure razed by fire, which was also owned by him.

Leland Cramer, member of the firm, says the firm has ordered two Petersen incubators from Gettysburg, O., electrically heated, but is not in a position yet to fill orders. An oil burning incubator was responsible for the recent fire and the electrically operated type is said to reduce the hazard besides furnishing cleaner baby chicks.

The local firm also intends to install a 50,000 capacity brooder.

BISHOP REESE TO CONFIRM CLASS

The Rt. Rev. T. I. Reese, bishop coadjutor of the Episcopal diocese of Southern Ohio, will hold a special service of confirmation at Christ Episcopal Church, this city, next Wednesday evening, it is announced.

Bishop Reese only recently resumed work after taking a rest of a few weeks under orders of his physician.

The service he will hold here will be the first of this nature he has participated in for some time. Bishop Reese will also give the address at the service.

DR. MCLELLAN IS W. C. T. U. SPEAKER

Mrs. Charles Weiss delightedly entertained the McClelland W. C. T. U. and several visitors Wednesday afternoon. Dr. B. R. McClelland was the speaker of the afternoon on "Sabbath Observance" which was interesting and helpful.

The speaker said "as much as metals and material things are strengthened in their wearing qualities by rest, so is the body and mind. By not observing the Fourth Commandment, we are robbing God as much as if he had seven dollars, gave a thief six and he took the seventh also."

Miss Zetta McClelland, president, presided over the meeting. Mrs. Carl Soward led devotions. Mrs. W. A. McClelland was in charge of the program, and read a poem on the subject. Several visitors gave short talks, describing their trips to the Dayton Military Home.

Mrs. E. C. Moorman displayed one of the "friendship bags" to be sent to Mexico. The union voted to buy and fill one of the bags. Mrs. Weiss served ice cream and cake.

ductor of the traction, which was due in Xenia at 2 o'clock, declared he had alighted from the car to look up and down the tracks to see if it was safe to proceed.

He asserted that he saw the cut of cars coming slowly toward the crossing and attempted to warn Motorman Harley Shiverdecker, Alpha, to hold the car. He alleged the motorman ignored his warning and proceeded on the crossing directly in front of the cars.

Conductor Weaver said he did not know if the signal lights which guard the crossing, were in operation. Witnesses said the lights were flashing.

John E. Daly, this city, was engineer of the locomotive.

Firemen extinguished a small fire that started when the stove in the car turned over.

HOPE OF COMPROMISE ON FLOOD CONTROL BILL IS ABANDONED

WASHINGTON, April 14.—Administration leaders in the house virtually abandoned hope today of working out a compromise on the Jones-Reid $25,000,000 flood control bill, and prepared to fight their battle out on the floor next week.

The refusal of Rep. Reid (R) of Illinois, chairman of the house flood control committee, and a majority of that body to require the south to pay part of the cost of flood control apparently doomed the compromise plan.

"It doesn't look as if a satisfactory solution can be obtained in the committee," said Rep. Snell (R) of New York, one of the administration leaders for a compromise.

Reid declared that the committee could not change overnight a decision reached after months of deliberation that flood control can be obtained only if the nation does the job.

The local contribution plan has been in effect for forty years and failed," he said.

"Joyous Bells of Easter," the cantata to be rendered at the Zion Baptist Church Sunday evening by the senior choir with Mr. G. I. Gaines chorister, presents this sacred story in song which can be of interest as well as charm to the listeners. Promptly at 8 p. m.

An excellent rendition of music both vocal and instrumental as well as prepared thought, was the high class program given at the East High Auditorium Friday evening under the management of the Parent-Teacher Association. While the audience was an appreciative one the program was of such a nature the auditorium should have been filled for the sake of the cause. Much credit is due Mr. William Hargrave, instructor of science at East High and his committee for securing such noted talent from Wilberforce University and also the city to appear. Mrs. Hazel Harris was chairman of the social committee.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Leach's home on E. Third St., was the scene of a lovely birthday surprise party Tuesday evening, given in honor of their sister, Miss Flora Leach. A pleasant evening was spent with music and games after which the guests were ushered to the dining room where a beautiful table was spread and decorated in accordance with Easter, and a three-course dinner was served. Miss Leach was the recipient of lovely gifts and all departed wishing her many more happy birthdays.

CLAY

"WE are but clay," the preacher said; "The heart is clay, and clay the brain, And soon or late there cometh death To mingle us with earth again."

Well, let the preacher have it so, And clay we are, and clay shall be;— Why iterate?—for this I know, That clay does very well for me.

When clay has such red mouths to kiss, Firm hands to grasp, it is enough; How can I take it aught amiss We are not made of rarer stuff?

And if one tempt you to believe His choice would be immortal gold, Question him, Can you then conceive A warmer heart than clay can hold?

Or richer joys than clay can feel? And when perforce he falters nay, Bid him renounce his wish and kneel In thanks for this same kindly clay.

ISLAND IS BARREN

HALIFAX, N. S., April 14.—Greenly Island, where the transatlantic flight from Dublin to New York ended, is a high barren piece of rock and ice, half a mile long, some seven miles south of the Labrador coast.

The island, a mere dot on the map, rises eighty feet above the sea. It is moss covered, but without other vegetation, and boasts not a single tree. It is formed something in the shape of a camel, with two large humps, and it is between these that the Bremen rests.

For this reason it is regarded here as most unlikely that the plane could take off, even though undamaged, should fuel be shipped to the island. The island is uninhabited except for lighthouse and half a dozen keepers and their families.

JINX DAY FAILS TO DAUNT CUPID

"Friday the 13th" usually considered the unluckiest of unlucky days, found Cupid undaunted in Greene County.

Two couples disregarded the hoodoo and obtained marriage licenses at the license bureau in Probate Court. They were: LeRoy Hinchshaw, 18 Union St., Xenia, bookkeeper, and Anna Louise Collins, R. R. No. 3, Xenia. Rev. H. B. McElree.

William H. Edwards, 337 Washington St., Xenia, clerk, and Louise A. Parrett, 108 W. N. Third St., Xenia. Rev. W. N. Shank.

A license was granted the previous day to Oscar Minor Grooms, 227 Miami Ave., Xenia, mill work, and Cleo Frances Tidd, 135 Orange St., Rev. F. H. Landgrave.

CONGRATULATIONS

BERLIN, April 14.—The North German Lloyd line transmitted the following message of congratulation to the crew of the Bremen through International News Service:

"Heartiest congratulations for a hard fought victory. All America will appreciate the transmission of German greetings through the Bremen as proof that idealism still inspires us. German will power and German courage will tackle the most difficult tasks. May this flight from continent to continent (which was made with the active participation of a comrade of Irish blood) lead towards mutual understanding which is a goal close to our hearts."

DE LUXE PATROL WAGONS
CHICAGO.—Six new patrol wagons have been put into service. They have been equipped with every possible consideration for their "passengers." And appearance is one of the chief features, too. They are robin egg blue, with bright red tops. The interiors are padded and the seats luxuriously upholstered. There are also accommodations for strap hangers when the riot business is brisk. The wagons are heated.

By not observing the Fourth Commandment, we are robbing God as much as if he had seven dollars, gave a thief six and he took the seventh also."

Miss Zetta McClelland, president, presided over the meeting. Mrs. Earl Soward led devotions. Mrs. W. A. McCall was in charge of the program, and read a poem on the subject. Several visitors gave short talks, describing their trips to the Dayton Military Home.

LITTLE INTEREST IN APRIL VOTING

Little interest is being shown in the approaching presidential preference primary election April 24 by Greene County voters, it is indicated in reports emanating from the Board of Elections.

Only two applications have been received for absentee voters ballots, according to R. E. Dunkel, clerk of the election board. Both applications were for Republican ballots.

Dunkel announces that these ballots are available to voters expecting to be away from the county on election day.

The deadline date for receiving applications is midnight April 21.

VOTING PRECINCTS IN COUNTY RAISED

Voting precincts in Greene County now number forty-eight, an increase of one since the last general election, according to R. E. Dunkel, clerk of the Greene County Board of Elections.

A factional fight for public offices in Osborn village last November aroused such interest that it brought more than 500 voters to the polls.

Under the Ohio election laws, if 500 or more votes are recorded in a village, the town must be divided into two voting precincts.

As a result, Osborn will hereafter have an east and west precinct.

HOPE OF COMPROMISE ON FLOOD CONTROL BILL IS ABANDONED

WASHINGTON, April 14—Administration leaders in the house virtually abandoned hope today of working out a compromise on the Jones-Reid $325,000,000 flood control bill, and prepared to fight their battle out on the floor next week.

The refusal of Rep. Reid (R) of Illinois, chairman of the subcommittee, to accept a compromise, and a majority of that body to require the south to pay part of the cost of flood control apparently doomed the compromise plan.

"It doesn't look as if a satisfactory solution can be obtained in the committee," said Rep. Snell (R) of New York, one of the administration leaders for a compromise.

Reid declared that the committee could not change overnight a decision reached after months of deliberation that flood control can be obtained only if the nation does the job.

"The local contribution plan has been in effect for forty years and failed," he said.

CHICAGO, March 14—Guns may pop in Chicago, but in Cook County Jail, where I have gone in search of elusive gangsters, all is quiet and peaceful.

If the bars were removed it might be mistaken for a school of unfortunate adults.

The women's division is presided over by Mrs. Adeline Kunasz, chief matron, a kindly woman who regards the inmates as human beings and addresses them as "her girls," not "prisoners." Many of these quartered there say they never have had such a clean place to live in before and if their confinement were voluntary they would prefer the jail to their homes.

Among the Murderesses
Six of the forty-eight prisoners I have seen in the jail are being held on murder charges and they are the mildest mannered of the lot.

Mrs. Kunasz says, "I would much rather work with murderesses than any other types of criminals. They usually aren't bad at heart—they kill in a moment of rage, then repent bitterly as soon as we get them here. Murderesses, as a rule, are much sicker type than the other prisoners."

"However, they are never so sorry that they lose interest in themselves. They scarcely wait from day to day to read what the papers say about them. The girls aren't neevah goin' to see me again, I ain't goin' to tetch another knife."

Within a few months the girl returned and Mrs. Kunasz reminded her of her parting promise.

"But Mis' Kunasz, ah didn't use a knife this time—I shot him!"

While in jail the girls are taught to sew and, often, to read and write.

It's a Dull Jail
Once in awhile a gangster's sweetheart drifts in.

There even isn't any excitement in the men's division of the institution.

Says Warden Ed. Fogarty, formerly warden of the Michigan City, Ind., prison, "If there are any really bad men in Chicago they haven't been in this jail. They are all fakes and frauds. The newspapers endow them with a lot of characteristics they haven't got and make ordinary dubs supermen. Take Marty Durkin and Russell Scott—big bluffs—both of them—but the writers wrote a glamour about them."

"What are beer barons and gangsters? Only names bestowed upon ordinary persons who bluff people into thinking they are powerful."

Fogarty came to the jail shortly after the former sheriff and the former warden had been sentenced to their own jail because they had permitted two so-called "beer barons," Terry Druggan and Frankie Lake, to "go to the dentist" every afternoon and return the following morning. The "dentists" were in exclusive "gold coast" apartments. No Place for Girl Desiring Excitement

Since gangsters don't roam the street grabbing innocent young ladies and pouring lead into houses indiscriminately, Chicago, on the surface, is one of the safest cities in the country.

If you like to listen to blood curdling stories—yarns of bad men who are above the law—you'll hear plenty of them here. But, if you're seeking villainous looking persons, who stalk the streets in broad daylight, bent on murder or worse, if you carry in your mind's eye a picture of a city where law abiding citizens stay home at night, fearing to risk their lives on the highways, don't come to Chicago.

At least it's too tame for one girl reporter who is a regular attendant at the movies and reads headlines with eager eyes.

Lo—the vanishing gangster! Chicago still has its gangsters, but the foud is less bitter and killings for personal reasons have largely replaced those done "for the good of the gang." The "big boys" of a decade ago are passing. Perhaps Chicago will erect a monument to their memory, even as Missouri erects one to Al Jennings, bandit of more adventurous days.

The colonial miller did not depend on the rush of the spring freshet to run his mill. It was the constant stream on which he could depend day in and day out, all year 'round that helped him grind out flour and profits. And so in your work today, it is not the occasional favor, the extra help given when you are down and out that will keep your business rolling along at a profit making rate. Consistent, day by day help, and encouragement from your banker, that will cheer up and speed up your work, is the service that means most in the long run.

It is just this that encourages the patrons of the Commercial Bank. They are sure of receiving intelligent and progressive financial assistance, but even more valuable, the personal advice and encouragement of the officials of this bank. Such day by day help is pushing them on to greater business activity.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

GLORY OR SHAME—The wise shall inherit glory: but shame shall be the promotion of fools.—Prov. 3:33.

REASON FOR POPULARITY

Like "Uncle Joe" Cannon, whose trail he crossed frequently in the legislative halls in Washington, former Senator Chauncey M. Depew, whose worldly career ended in his ninety-fourth year, was something of a political czar in his day. Somehow one naturally links the memories of these two picturesque figures who, oddly enough, were born only two years apart, Cannon having been the younger.

Though the New York senator was perhaps of a more polished type than the late cigar-chewing Illinois fire-eater, they had much in common; both were lawyers; both were staunch regulars of the G. O. P. "inner circle" of their day and both had a peculiarly striking sense of humor that won the hearts of the American people, especially as their advancing ages took them out of the range of public criticism for some of their dictatorial political activities in their more aggressive days. Their terms in the national congress—the one as senator and the other as representative—overlapped for many years.

Senator Depew's wit and humor remained with him to the last. These combined with his exceptional ability as an orator marked him as one of the most-sought after-dinner speakers of his time. He filled many New York state offices, was one time president and afterward chairman of the New York Central railroad and served for a time as ambassador to Japan. In the 1888 Republican national convention he received ninety-nine votes for the presidential nomination.

But the reason he was universally liked was that he lived to be almost 94 without acquiring a frown.

STRANGE REVERSAL OF HISTORY

A considerable number of American delegates have been taking part in the deliberations of the International Missionary council, which has been meeting at Jerusalem, the place where the Christian religion got its start. It is one of the strange reversals of history, that Jerusalem was once one of the leading centers of the ancient world, while America was an unknown wilderness.

Since that far away time, the tables have turned, and America is one of the greatest centers of civilization, while Jerusalem until recent years has been far removed from the currents of modern progress. Thus the achievements of civilization are often overthrown by the failures of men. The fact that a country is rich and advanced in one age, does not prove it will be in years to come.

Entertaining is called a fine art, but the social climbers say that getting the chance to be entertained is still finer.

The April showers may bring forth the May flowers, but they are still more successful in producing the June weeds.

The more people need money, the more likely they are to throw it away in foolish investments.

The national sucker list is probably a good deal longer than that of the income tax payers.

You never find true religion and bad manners in the same individual.

With the automobile touring season beginning, the telephone poles along the roads will need to be well braced and strengthened.

CARING

The churches of America would be doing a great service if through their central organization or through the agencies under their control they would launch a campaign to get out the vote for the primary elections this spring and summer, and for the general election next fall. When the present president of the United States was elected not more than 50 per cent of the qualified voters of the country went to the polls. There is no sadder commentary on our sometimes feebly functioning democracy. The first really great job of a better generation than ours is the overcoming of criminal indifference.

COLLEGE BUILDINGS

Most college faculties and college trustees fret much about their lack of physical equipment on the campus—the lack of buildings. And yet, college buildings, in the scheme of education, are of even less than secondary importance. What colleges need most is men and women of vision on their teaching staffs. They need what Glenn Frank calls educational statesmanship. They need teachers to put young minds in touch with the voluminous but highly disorganized mass of new knowledge in this world.

WHAT 10 BOOKS?

Dr. Charles W. Kennedy, Princeton professor, some time ago wrote a poem containing this verse:

"Upon my walls I'd have a row
Of ten wise, magic books I know
To bring all ages and all lands
With the stretching of my hands."

If you were to go away to a desert island with ten books and ten books only, what ten would you choose? The writer of the Way of the World will receive suggestions. Dr. Henry Van Dyke, known to thousands by his books, his lectures, and his sermons, picks these: the Bible, Shakespeare, Burton Stevenson's "Home Book of English Verse," Plutarch's "Lives," "Henry Esmond"—and says Dr. Van Dyke, "I'd reserve the other four until just before leaving for my desert isle."

NEW YORK, April 14. — Variegated notes of a reporter covering the biggest beat in the world:

A permanent wave shop on Broadway, near Longacre square, the actors' Elysian field, has as many male customers as female.

Helen Keller, the famous blind, deaf and dumb woman, is a movie fan. She attends pictures with her secretary, Miss Polly Thompson, who spells into Miss Keller's hands what she sees.

Elliot Clark, the portrait painter, tells how a brick started him on his distinguished career. The brick, tossed at him with no good intent, cracked his skull when he was nine. During the long period of convalescence, he passed away his time learning to draw the flowers kept in his room.

Edward "Daddy" Browning, who used to gloat over the publicity he received, now gives his parties secretly.

The press agent for one Broadway producer receives a salary of $30,000 a year, more than the salary of the managing editor who fired him and caused him to become a space-graber.

Thornton Niven Wilder, author of "The Bridge of San Luis Rey," a novel that is one of the biggest best-sellers in several seasons, continues to hold an obscure teaching post in Lawrenceville, N. J.

Lord Cawley, a grandnephew of Wellington, the "Iron Duke," is appearing in a Broadway melodrama under the name of Arthur Wellesley. And the Earl of Amherst, using the name Jeffrey Holmesdale, is a reporter on a New York paper.

Bedspreads in a Brooklyn hotel have embroidered upon them "Virtute et Opera," which our Latin expert translates as "Virtue and Hard Work."

Ring Lardner, who has flat feet, calls his Long Island country place, "The Mangle."

Flying clubs are now as fashionable as automobile clubs were 15 years ago. Several of them have been organized on Long Island. Members are taught how to pilot a plane and then are supplied with a ship at a club rate. Hangars and expert mechanics, weather information, maps, etc., are among other privileges. One of the clubs plans to engage noted aviators as instructors in stunt flying, and sponsor them in expeditions or record flights.

Texas Guinan is now doing a Henry Ford and teaching old-fashioned square dances to patrons of her club. And they're popular with patrons. Jazz dances have become too strenuous for the tired business men.

"Vincent," in a barber shop in Exchange place, which cost him $100,000 to outfit, shaves and cuts the hair of many famous financial men. He is in a position to pick up inside information on the stock market, but he does not speculate. His customers, who know that the market is something a non-professional can't beat, advise him not to.

"Vincent" is one of the reasons why most stock exchange traders wear flowers in their lapels. Three days a week he pins a carnation upon the coat of every customer.

OUR WALKING HABITS IN STORES

The problem of where people walk in stores and why they do it, excited the interest of a statistical expert. For a period of two or three years he conducted experiments in stores of different kinds in various places. He tried selling small articles in different parts of the stores under all manner of conditions. Usually he used candy—small sugar wafers of different flavors—in conducting the experiments.

An inexpensive article had to be employed on such tests, for it is obvious that the selling power of one location over another would not be so applicable to the more costly articles, which require thought and consideration before buying. A man may have his attention attracted to a tooth brush or an assortment of candies, and buy, but the mere fact that he suddenly comes upon a farm tractor or grand piano does not mean that he will immediately order one sent home.

Of course, weather, rain, cold, or a warm spell, each exerted an influence over people's desire for candy. But by making a careful count of the number of persons entering a store, and making such allowance as his experience had taught him was proper for each change in conditions, the investigator finally learned a number of things which enabled him to formulate some fairly positive rules.

First, we must assume that the frontage a store has to start with is adequate for conducting the kind of business it contains. If a dealer in furniture, or motor trucks, undertook to get along in a space only large enough for a cigar store, even in an excellent location, he might find it impossible to conduct business. Additional frontage might mean the difference between a failure and success. A store three times as wide, so that he could display his stock, might be worth to him not only three times as much, but perhaps ten times as much.

But if the proprietor of a little restaurant has a place reasonably large in comparison with other restaurants, and yet, wishing to expand his business, doubles his frontage, how much more should he pay?

In trying to arrive at the solution of this problem the investigator estimated and theorized and observed and still did not have the question satisfactorily answered.

Then he did a very simple

REDUCING RHYTHMICS FOR NECK AND SHOULDERS

The neck and shoulder line is so very lovely when it is pretty, that you certainly should pay a reasonable amount of attention to either making it so or keeping it so. The unpleasant lumps of fat that form on neck and shoulder blades are usually neglected until they really do spoil the entire body line. I have already described an exercise which is particularly good for the shoulders. But I shall repeat it here.

Lie flat on your stomach on the floor. Place the weight of your body on the palms of your hands, raising your body up and down several times balanced between the toes and palms. Do this very slowly, for the best results.

For special neck exercises, stand in a normal position. Slowly lift the head upward, turn to the right as far as possible, keeping the head stretched far up and slightly backward. To make the movement more effective, open and close the mouth while you are turning. Slowness is a prime essential of success in this exercise. Speed may strain the spinal cord. Fold the arms on the chest, and throw them sideways, fingers resting on the shoulders, elbows pointing down. Eight counts.

And this last one is particularly valuable for both developing and reducing. Stand very erect. The muscles of your shoulders and arms are to be contracted and then expanded, in slow, deliberate movements. To do this, assume the attitude of a hollow chest, shoulders curving forward and lungs cramped. If you are doing it correctly, your upper arms and shoulder blades feel slightly uncomfortable. Now press the shoulders far back, wards, doing the contracting in eight counts, and the expanding in another eight. The exercise, you see, must be very slow.

Another neck exercise is as follows: Turn the head to the right, then forward down to the left, and then throw the head back very slowly, using a full 16 counts for the movements and eight more for the position of head thrown back. Reverse the movements and repeat eight times.

The ordinary chin rotating movement is an excellent exercise for the development of a pretty, slender neck, and to insure good carriage, I suggest you do the very simple thing of standing against a wall pressing back your shoulders until they touch. Another very simple shoulder exercise which I have particularly recommended for girls of the student age and the student round shoulders, is this: Bend the arms at the elbows, finger tips resting on shoulders. Work the bended arm in a circular movement, first forward, and then back, eight times each way. Do the movement slowly and you will find it more effective. Do it evenly, to music, and you will find it more pleasant and graceful. I think you have a good selection of neck and shoulder rhythmic exercises now. And I know if you do them faithfully, you will soon have a very beautiful neck and shoulder line.

WHEN YOUR CHILD GETS DIPHTHERIA

If your child accidentally was poisoned, you would consider yourself a criminal if you didn't immediately administer an antidote to that poison, wouldn't you?

If your child contracts diphtheria, we consider you just as much a criminal if you don't have administered the only known antidote to the deadly poison of diphtheria. And the only known immediate antidote to diphtheria is the diphtheria antitoxin, and the sooner the doctor administers this antitoxin, the more effective it is.

(And you should have your child protected against contracting diphtheria, by the administration of toxin-antitoxin (t. a. t.) which causes its own body to manufacture a defense. I told you of this in yesterday's article.)

In a series of 2,500 cases of diphtheria reported by the New York Hospital for Contagious Diseases, it was found that when the antitoxin was given on the first day of diphtheria, only about two per cent died; the second day, about seven per cent; the third day, about 17 per cent; the fourth day, about 23 per cent; the sixth day, about 38 per cent.

This data shows the importance of administering the antitoxin early in the disease. Deaths do occur after it is given, but they are caused by the diphtheria and not the antitoxin. On investigation it is always found that the patients had received the antitoxin as a last resort, when it was too late to overcome the poison.

The diphtheria antitoxin is so harmless that physicians give it in cases of suspicious looking sore throats with membranes, before a laboratory test is taken to determine whether it is diphtheria or not, because if it is diphtheria, much valuable time has been saved, and if it is not diphtheria, no harm will come from the antitoxin.

Antitoxin

I'll tell you a little about diphtheria antitoxin. It is an antidote to the poison of diphtheria, which has been developed by Moche Sponge — one cup strong coffee, three teaspoons gelatin, three eggs, three-fourths cup of sugar, four tablespoons cocoa, one teaspoon vanilla. Soak the gelatin in a quarter cup cold coffee for five minutes. Bring the remaining three-fourths cup of coffee to a boil and pour over gelatin. Separate the eggs, beat the whites dry and sift in sugar slowly, beating meanwhile. Beat yolks until foamy, and add vanilla. Stir cocoa into coffee mixture and then beat with egg beater to eliminate all lumps. Add this mixture to the yolks, and pour into the whites, combine thoroughly but lightly. Pour into a chilled mold and set in the icebox. Serve with whipped or unwhipped cream. This dessert will set within an hour of the time it is made.

healthy young horses.

The horses which are used to manufacture the stables are submitted to rigid inspection. They are placed in detention stables for several weeks to be sure they are free from glanders and other diseases. These pronounced healthy in every way are admitted to the stables.

Here they are taken care of as carefully as a patient would be in an up-to-date hospital. They are injected with a very small amount of diphtheria antitoxin, not enough to make them sick, but enough so their cells and blood immediately begin to manufacture a defense against it. As soon as this defense is prepared, another dose of the toxin, this time a little larger, is given. This treatment continues for a period of six weeks to three months.

At the end of the injection, the horse apparently no longer the worse for the defense process that has been going on in his body—has some of his blood drawn. This is allowed to stand until it clots, and the clear, pure serum, full of its defensive principles against diphtheria, is the diphtheria antitoxin. It is put through a complicated process which purifies it.

This life-giving substance is the material which the anti-vivisectionists call "putrid animal matter" and advise you against, and also try to get laws enacted so this and other such remedies cannot be manufactured! It is safe to say no antivivisectionist ever saw a child strangle to death, or die suddenly from the deadly poisons of diphtheria.

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON, April 14. — Who says a man can't really get sick of being president?

The fact is, hardly any of us believe he can.

Yet it's notorious that some other job than the one we're holding down looks to most of us like the goal of all human happiness, us succeeds in grabbing it off—but, occasionally, when one of us succeeds in grabbing it off, he generally reports himself good-an'-so-dinged tired of it before long.

Mayn't this be as true of the presidency as of anything else? Only, nobody living, except Calvin Coolidge and William Howard Taft, having given it a trial, the rest of us can't rasp the idea with our flinty minds.

It isn't impossible to imagine that Calvin Coolidge thinks of the presidency as a veritable hoodoo to him.

It was as president that he lost his much-loved younger son. It was as president that he attended his father's funeral. As president he saw his wife's mother fading steadily away. As president, in the last year, he has watched Mrs. Coolidge's own health decline — nothing serious her doctors insist, but the fact remains that she is no more than a shadow of her former self.

These things are mere historic incidents in the life of a president, but they're tragedies in the life of a man—and, to himself, we mustn't forget that Calvin Coolidge is a human being, who feels grief and loneliness, even though to the rest of us he's simply chief magistrate of the United States.

Most people who may originally have held it, I think have abandoned the theory that President Coolidge's Black Hills announcement of his choice not to run again this year was an insincere political gesture.

Waiving the detail that such an interpretation wasn't very flattering to the president himself, the corroborative evidence he's since given of his sincerity is pretty convincing.

If he hadn't meant what he said he'd hardly have rubbed it in as thoroughly as he has.

He wouldn't have given the tacit approval he's given to new candidates.

If he had anything up his sleeve, it's a certainty he'd have revealed it at least to his closest friends in the "draft Coolidge" crowd, and they'd be surer than they are of their ground. Their actions speak louder than words of the state of indecision they're in.

Personally I've a notion of my own, in explanation of the president's attitude toward another term.

My guess is that he honestly believes the precedent would be bad — that he considered eight years enough for any president, and proposes to draw the line at six rather than run the score up to ten—that he fears future danger to the country, if he yields to the "draft board" in June.

Of course there are other hypotheses. For instance: Coolidge wants to go down in history as the initiator of a new presidential policy.

He doesn't want to risk defeat, or even re-election by a smaller majority than he got before.

LOVING HELPS LIVING

A little girl writes complaining that her parents are always finding fault with her. That she is happy in school, but they want her to leave, and she is miserable when at home. We parents often scold unnecessarily, I suppose. We are so anxious to have our children turn out to be perfect men and women that we nag at them. Possibly if they kept count of the times we scold and the times we really make sacrifices they would find that the scoldings are comparatively few and far between, but they are the things that stand out. It would be better to help our young people to live by loving them, instead of fault finding.

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I am a school girl and would like your advice. Life is rather miserable for me. My parents do not want to send me to school any more. They are always finding something to scold me about. I do all I can, but nothing I do seems to please them. I enjoy myself at school very much, but when I get home all I can think of is 'what can I do?'"

"Unhappy."

It is probably a thoughtless habit your parents have gotten into. Unhappy, and they don't realize how much they do it. Tell them some time what you have told me. They will probably be shocked to think you feel that way. As to leaving school, tell them that you will be able to earn much more money when you are old enough to go to work if you can complete your studies. I do hope they let you continue.

Discouraged is a high school girl and is too fat and can't make friends. She wants to know how to reduce and how to attract. I do think it is a great disadvantage for a school girl to be too fat. Discouraged. Candy, cake and other sweets are the trouble. Do you want to get slimmer enough to give them up? You must have the foods necessary for proper growth, so drink plenty of milk, eat plenty of vegetables, also cereals and whole wheat bread in sufficient quantity, but cut out the sweets and get plenty of exercise, and see if you cannot get your weight down to normal. If you send a stamped, self-addressed envelope and 10 cents in coin I will send you a pamphlet on reducing, but you must bear in mind that it is written for adults, and that a girl of your age must be sure to get enough substantial food to keep her growing.

Why drop your friend, "Billy," unless you don't like him? I should think after accepting a nice Christmas present from him you would be nice to him.

OBLIGING

The constable of a New England village, a man of exceedingly good nature, found it necessary to lock up three tramps who had strayed into his jurisdiction. Shortly after the arrest, he was met by the mayor of the village, who, observing the constable hurrying down the main street, asked: "Where are you going, Constable?"

"Oh," exclaimed the constable, "the three tramps I just locked up want to play bridge and I'm out hunting for a fourth."

WHEN THE GHOST FLIES

"T'cheek! T'cheek! You fellows can do as you like, but I am not going to hang around here any longer. I have no wish to meet with the ghost tonight, I can tell you. It is bad enough to hear his wail."

"Not that Wood Thrush and Veery and Vesper Sparrow have all said good night to the day there is no telling at what moment he may appear. I am off. Happy dreams, friends."

"Happy dreams, Blackie!" chirped the birds as their companion mounted into the air. Bob White immediately took to his wings. "I am going to follow Blackie's example and get out of the way of the ghost. I feel bad enough about this daylight saving business without being scared to death. And as many times as I have heard him call of the winged mystery always makes me shiver."

"Me, too," agreed Flicker. "Pooh! You young fellows are afraid of your shadows!" scoffed Sam Peabody. "You know as well as I do that the ghost is only a bird like ourselves. Just because he flies in the night is no reason why you should run away from him."

"That is all very true Sam Sparrow, but it is not he, himself, that I dislike, but his voice. It makes my feathers stand on end to hear that sad moan floating on the darkness. If you will excuse me I think I will fly home. It is time. I was there, anyhow."

Flicker politely but firmly took himself off, and in spite of his brave words it was plain to be seen that Sam Sparrow didn't a bit like to be left alone. He looked this way and that and scratched one wing nervously with his beak. Then something happened that made him lose every speck of his boasted courage.

"Whip-poor-will! Whip-poor-will!" A far off in the deep woods on the other side of the pasture sounded the long, quivering cry.

Without waiting to hear whether it was coming nearer or not, Sam Sparrow gave a queer little hop into the air and flew away just as fast as his wings would take him, and Peter noticed that Sam Sparrow took good care not to venture near the woods.

Can poor Whip-poor-will be the ghost that those birds were talking about? He must be, or why should Sam Sparrow have scuttled off like that?

The very idea of any one being afraid of Whip-poor-will. He is a harmless fellow, I am sure of that. Why he doesn't make half the noise that the rest of the birds do. He has passed me in the barnyard many times at evening without a sound. I should never have guessed who it was if he hadn't stopped to rest and tell me his name of his own accord. Why in the world the birds should fear a noiseless chap like that I can't understand.

Peter was puzzled.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

GLORY OR SHAME—The wise shall inherit glory: but shame shall be the promotion of fools.—Prov. 3:33.

REASON FOR POPULARITY

Like "Uncle Joe" Cannon, whose trail he crossed frequently in the legislative halls in Washington, former Senator Chauncey M. Depew, whose worldly career ended in his ninety-fourth year, was something of a political czar in his day. Somehow one naturally links the memories of these two picturesque figures who, oddly enough, were born only two years apart, Cannon having been the younger.

Though the New York senator was perhaps of a more polished type than the late cigar-chewing Illinois fire-eater, they had much in common; both were lawyers; both were staunch regulars of the G. O. P., "inner circle" of their day and both had a peculiarly striking sense of humor that won the hearts of the American people, especially as their advancing ages took them out of the range of public criticism for some of their dictatorial political activities in their more aggressive days. Their terms in the national congress—the one as senator and the other as representative—overlapped for many years.

Senator Depew's wit and humor remained with him to the last. These combined with his exceptional ability as an orator marked him as one of the most-sought after-dinner speakers of his time. He filled many New York state offices, was one time president and afterward chairman of the New York Central railroad and served for a time as ambassador to Japan. In the 1888 Republican national convention he received ninety-nine votes for the presidential nomination.

But the reason he was universally liked was that he lived to be almost 94 without acquiring a grouch.

STRANGE REVERSAL OF HISTORY

A considerable number of American delegates have been taking part in the deliberations of the International Missionary council, which has been meeting at Jerusalem, the place where the Christian religion got its start. It is one of the strange reversals of history, that Jerusalem was once one of the leading centers of the ancient world, while America was an unknown wilderness.

Since that far away time, the tables have turned, and America is one of the greatest centers of civilization, while Jerusalem until recent years has been far removed from the currents of modern progress. Thus the achievements of civilization are often overthrown by the failures of men. The fact that a country is rich and advanced in one age, does not prove it will be in years to come.

Entertaining is called a fine art, but the social climbers say that getting the chance to be entertained is still finer.

The April showers may bring forth the May flowers, but they are still more successful in producing the June weeds.

The more people need money, the more likely they are to throw it away in foolish investments.

The national sucker list is probably a good deal longer than that of the income tax payers.

You never find true religion and bad manners in the same individual.

With the automobile touring season beginning, the telephone poles along the roads will need to be well braced and strengthened.

CARING

The churches of America would be doing a great service if through their central organization or through the agencies under their control they would launch a campaign to get out the vote for the primary elections this spring and summer, and for the general election next fall. When the present president of the United States was elected not more than 50 per cent of the qualified voters of the country went to the polls. There is no sadder commentary on our sometimes feebly functioning democracy. The first really great job of a better generation than ours is the overcoming of criminal indifference.

COLLEGE BUILDINGS

Most college faculties and college trustees fret much about their lack of physical equipment on the campus—the lack of buildings. And yet, college buildings, in the scheme of education, are of even less than secondary importance. What colleges need most is men and women of vision on their teaching staffs. They need what Glenn Frank calls educational statesmanship. They need teachers to put young minds in touch with the voluminous but highly disorganized mass of new knowledge in this world.

WHAT 10 BOOKS?

Dr. Charles W. Kennedy, Princeton professor, some time ago wrote a poem containing this verse:

"Upon my walls I'd have a row
Of ten wise, magic books I know
To bring all ages and all lands
With the stretching of my hands."

If you were to go away to a desert island with ten books and ten books only, what ten would you choose? The writer of the Way of the World will receive suggestions. Dr. Henry Van Dyke, known to thousands by his books, his lectures, and his sermons, picks these: The Bible, Shakespeare, Burton Stevenson's "Home Book of English Verse," Plutarch's "Lives," "Henry Esmond"—and says Dr. Van Dyke, "I'd reserve the other four until just before leaving for my desert isle."

NEW YORK, April 14. — Vari-galant tales of a reporter covering the biggest beat in the world: A permanent wave shop on Broadway, near Longacre square, the actors' Elysian field, has as many male customers as female.

Helen Keller, the famous blind, deaf and dumb woman, is a movie fan. She attends pictures with her secretary, Miss Polly Thompson, who spells into Miss Keller's hands what she sees.

Elliott Clark, the portrait painter, tells how a brick started him on his distinguished career. The brick, tossed at him with no good intent, cracked his skull when he was nine. During the long period of convalescence, he passed away his time learning to draw the flowers kept in his room.

Edward "Daddy" Browning, who used to goad over the publicity he received, now gives his parties secretly.

The press agent for one Broadway producer receives a salary of $30,000 a year, more than the salary of the managing editor who fired him and caused him to become a space-graber.

Thornton Niven Wilder, author of "The Bridge of San Luis Rey," a novel that is one of the biggest best-sellers in several seasons, continues to hold an obscure teaching post in Lawrenceville, N. J.

Lord Cawley, a grandnephew of Wellington, the "Iron Duke," is appearing in a Broadway melodrama under the name of Arthur Wellesley. And the Earl of Amherst, using the name Jeffrey Holmes, is a reporter on a New York paper.

Bedsprings in a Brooklyn hotel have embroidered upon them "Virtute et Opera," which our Latin expert translates as "Virtue and Hard Work."

Ring Lardner, who has flat feet, calls his Long Island country place, "The Mange."

Flying clubs are now as fashionable as automobile clubs were 15 years ago. Several of them have been organized on Long Island. Members are taught how to pilot a plane and then are supplied with a ship at a club rate. Hangars and expert mechanics, weather information, maps, etc., are among other privileges. One of the clubs plans to engage noted aviators as instructors in stunt flying, and sponsor them in expeditions or record flights.

Texas Guinan is now doing a Henry Ford and teaching old-fashioned square dances to patrons of his club. And they're popular with patrons. Jazz dances have become too strenuous for the tired business men.

"Vincent," in a barber shop in Exchange place, which cost him $100,000 to outfit, shaves and cuts the hair of many famous financial men. He is in a position to pick up inside information on the stock market, but he does not speculate. His customers, who know that the market is something a non-professional can't beat, advise him not to.

"Vincent" is one of the reasons why most stock exchange traders wear flowers in their lapels. Three days a week he pins a carnation upon the coat of every customer.

OUR WALKING HABITS IN STORES

The problem of where people walk in stores, and why they do it, excited the interest of a statistical expert. For a period of two or three years he conducted experiments in stores of different kinds in various places. He tried selling small articles in different parts of the stores under all manner of conditions. Usually he used candy—small sugar waters of different flavors—in conducting the experiments.

An inexpensive article had to be employed on such tests, for it is obvious that the selling power of one location over another would not be so applicable to the more costly articles, which require thought and consideration before buying. A man may have his attention attracted to a tooth brush or an assortment of candies, and buy, but the mere fact that he suddenly comes upon a farm tractor or grand piano does not mean that he will immediately order one sent home.

Of course, weather, rain, cold, or warm spell, each exerted an influence over people's desire for candy. But by making a careful count of the number of persons entering a store, and making such allowance as his experience had taught him was proper for each change in conditions, the investigator finally learned a number of things which enabled him to formulate some fairly positive rules.

First, we must assume that the frontage a store has to start with is adequate for conducting the kind of business it contains. If a dealer in furniture, or motor trucks, undertook to get along in a space only large enough for a cigar store, even in an excellent location, he might find it impossible to conduct business. Additional frontage might mean the difference between failure and success. A store three times as wide, so that he could display his stock, might be worth to him not only three times as much, but perhaps ten times as much.

But if the proprietor of a little restaurant has a place reasonably large, in comparison with other restaurants, and yet, wishing to expand his business, doubts his frontage, how much more should he pay?

In trying to arrive at the solution of this problem the investigator estimated and theorized and observed and still did not have the question satisfactorily answered.

Then he did a very simple

REDUCING RHYTHMICS FOR NECK AND SHOULDERS

The neck and shoulder line is so very lovely when it's pretty, that you certainly should pay a reasonable amount of attention to either making it so or keeping it so. The unpleasant lumps of fat that form on neck and shoulder blades are usually neglected until they really do spoil the entire body line. I have already described an exercise which is particularly good for the shoulders. But I shall repeat it here.

Lie flat on your stomach on the floor. Place the weight of your body on the palms of your hands, raising your body up and down several times balanced between the toes and palms. Do this very slowly, for the best results.

For special neck exercises, stand in a normal position. Slowly lift the head upward, turn to the right as far as possible, holding the head stretched far up and slightly backward. To make the movement more effective, open and close the mouth while you are turning. Slowness is a prime essential of success in this exercise.

Strain the spinal cord. Fold the arms on the chest, and throw them sideways, fingers resting on the shoulders, elbows pointing down. Eight counts.

And this last one is particularly valuable for both developing and reducing. Strain the muscles of your shoulders and arms are to be contracted and then expanded, in slow, deliberate movements. To do this, assume the attitude of a hollow chest, shoulders curving forward and lungs cramped. If you are doing it correctly, your upper arms and shoulder blades feel slightly uncomfortable. Now press the shoulders far back, wards, doing the contracting in eight counts, and the expanding in another eight. The exercise, you see, must be very slow.

Another neck exercise is as follows: Turn the head to the right, then forward down to the left, and then turn the head back very slowly, using a full 16 counts for the movements and eight more for the position of head thrown back. Reverse the movements and repeat eight times.

An ordinary chin rotating movement is an excellent exercise for the development of a pretty, slender neck, and to insure good carriage, I suggest you do the very simple thing of standing against a wall pressing back your shoulders until they touch.

Another very simple shoulder exercise which I have particularly recommended for girls of the student age and the student round shoulders, is this: Bend the arms at the elbows, finger tips resting on shoulders. Work the head arm in a circular movement, first forward, and then back, eight times each way. Do the movement slowly and you will find it more effective. Do it evenly, to music, and you will find it more pleasant and successful. I think you have a good selection of neck and shoulder rhythmic now. And I know if you do them faithfully, you will soon have a very beautiful neck and shoulder line.

WHEN YOUR CHILD GETS DIPHTHERIA

If your child accidentally was poisoned, you would consider yourself a crime. If you didn't immediately administer an antidote to that poison, wouldn't you?

If your child contracts diphtheria, thing: He began to ask scores of business men in various cities, who had enlarged their establishments, what the results had been. Did doubling frontage mean a doubling of gross income? If not, how much increase did it mean?

After carefully tabulating the results of these inquiries, he found that there is a definite relation between the increases of store frontage by prosperous establishments, and the gain in their total receipts. He considered these facts and figures in the light of what he had already learned about floorspace values, and finally he came to definite conclusions. He set down a schedule of values for increased frontage, and then by further investigation and repeated tests he found that his schedule would prove correct.

When a man has a store with say, 20 feet of frontage on a busy street and increases this to 40 feet, he is not justified in paying double his original rent. To be exact, the additional 20 feet is worth to him only 68 per cent more than he has been paying. If his rent has been $100 a month it should now be $168. If he jumped from 20 to 70 feet frontage, or, in other words, if his store is three and one-half times as large as formerly, his rent should be increased by only 212 per cent—from, say, $100 to $212 a month.

The diphtheria antitoxin is so harmless that physicians give it in cases of suspicious looking sore throats with membranes, before a laboratory test is taken to determine whether it is diphtheria or not, because if it is diphtheria, much valuable time has been saved, and if it is not diphtheria, no harm will come from the antitoxin.

ira, we consider you just as much a criminal if you don't have administered the only known antidote to the deadly poison of diphtheria. And the only known immediate antidote to diphtheria is the diphtheria antitoxin, and the sooner the doctor administers this antitoxin, the more effective it is.

(And you should have your child protected against contracting diphtheria, by the administration of toxin-antitoxin (t. a. t.) which causes its own body to manufacture a defense. I told you of this in yesterday's article.)

In a series of 2,500 cases of diphtheria reported by the New York Hospital for Contagious Diseases, it was found that when the antitoxin was given on the first day of diphtheria, only about two per cent died; the second day, about seven per cent; the third day, over 17 per cent; the fourth day, about 232 per cent; the sixth day, about 38 per cent.

This data shows the importance of administering the antitoxin early in the disease. Deaths do occur after it is given, but they are caused by the diphtheria and not the antitoxin. On investigation it is always found that the patients had received the antitoxin as a last resort, when it was too late to overcome the poison.

The diphtheria antitoxin is so harmless that physicians give it in cases of suspicious looking sore throats with membranes, before a laboratory test is taken to determine whether it is diphtheria or not, because if it is diphtheria, much valuable time has been saved, and if it is not diphtheria, no harm will come from the antitoxin.

I'll tell you a little about diphtheria antitoxin. It is an antidote to the poison of diphtheria, which has been developed by Moche Sponge — one cup strong coffee, three teaspoons gelatin, three eggs, three-fourths cup of sugar, four tablespoons cocoa, one teaspoon vanilla. Soak the gelatin in a quarter cup cold coffee for five minutes. Bring the remaining three-fourths cup of coffee to a boil and pour over gelatin. Separate the eggs, beat the whites dry and stiff in sugar slowly, beating meanwhile. Beat yolks until foamy, and add vanilla. Stir cocoa into coffee gelatin mixture and then beat with egg beater to eliminate all lumps. Add this mixture to the yolks, and pour into the whites, combine thoroughly but lightly. Pour into a chilled mold and set in the icebox. Serve with whipped or unwhipped cream. This dessert will set within an hour of the time it is made.

healthy young horses.

The horses which are used to manufacture this defense are submitted to rigid inspection. They are placed in detention stables for several weeks to be sure they are free from glanders and other diseases. These pronounced healthy in every way are admitted to the sanitary t. a. t. stables.

Here they are taken care of as carefully as a patient would be in an up-to-date hospital. They are injected with a very small amount of diphtheria antitoxin, not enough to make them sick, but enough so their cells and blood immediately begin to manufacture a defense against it. As soon as this defense is prepared, another dose of the toxin, this time a little larger, is given. This treatment continues for a period of six weeks to three months.

At the end of the injection, the horse—apparently none the worse for the defense process that has been going on in his body—has some of his blood drawn. This is allowed to stand until it clots, and the clear, pure serum, full of its defensive principles against diphtheria is the diphtheria antitoxin. It is put through a complicated process which purifies it.

This life-giving substance is the material which the anti-vivisectionists call "putrid animal matter" and advise you against, and also try to get laws enacted so this and other such remedies can not be manufactured! It is safe to say no antivivisectionist ever saw a child strangle to death, or die suddenly from the deadly poisons of diphtheria.

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON, April 14. — Who says a man can't really get sick of being president?

The fact is, hardly any of us believe he can.

Yet it's notorious that some other job than the one we're holding down looks to most of us like the goal of all human happiness — but, occasionally, when one of us succeeds in grabbing it off, he generally reports himself good-as-gold-dinged tired of it before long.

Mayn't this be as true of the presidency as of anything else? —only, nobody living except Calvin Coolidge and William Howard Taft, having given it a trial, the rest of us can't rasp the idea with our flinty minds.

It isn't impossible to imagine that Calvin Coolidge thinks of the presidency as a veritable hoodoo to him.

It was as president that he lost his much-loved younger son. It was as president that he attended his father's funeral. As president he has seen his wife's mother fading steadily away. As president, in the last year, he has watched Mrs. Coolidge's own health decline — nothing serious her doctors insist, but the fact remains that she is no more than a shadow of her former self.

These things are more historic incidents in the life of a president, but they're tragedies in the life of a man — and, to himself, we mustn't forget that Calvin Coolidge is a human being, who feels grief and loneliness, even though to the rest of us he's simply chief magistrate of the United States.

Most people who may originally have held it, I think have abandoned the theory that President Coolidge's Black Hills announcement of his choice not to run again this year was an insincere political gesture.

Waiving the detail that such an interpretation wasn't very flattering to the president himself, the corroborative evidence he's since given of his sincerity is pretty convincing.

If he hadn't meant what he said he'd hardly have rubbed it in as thoroughly as he has.

He wouldn't have given the tacit approval he's given to new candidacies.

If he had anything up his sleeve, it's a certainty he'd have revealed it at least to his closest friends in the "draft Coolidge" crowd, and they'd be surer than they are of their ground. Their actions speak louder than words of the state of indecision they're in.

Personally I've a notion of my own, in explanation of the president's attitude toward another term.

My guess is that he honestly believes the precedent would be bad — that he considered eight years enough for any president, and proposes to draw the line at six rather than run the score up to ten — that he fears future danger to the country, if he yields to the "draft board" in June.

Of course there are other hypotheses. For instance: Coolidge wants to go down in history as the initiator of a new presidential policy.

He doesn't want to risk defeat, or even re-election by a smaller majority than he got before.

LOVING HELPS LIVING

A little girl writes complaining that her parents are always finding fault with her. That she is happy in school, but they want her to leave, and she is miserable when at home. We parents often scold unnecessarily, I suppose. We are so anxious to have our children turn out to be perfect men and women that we nag at them. Possibly if they kept count of the times we scold and the times we really make sacrifices, they would find that the scoldings are comparatively few and far between, but they are the things that stand out. It would be better to help our young people to live by loving them, instead of fault finding.

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I am a school girl and would like your advice. Life is rather miserable for me. My parents do not want to send me to school any more. They are always finding something to scold me about. I do all I can, but nothing I do seems to please them, I enjoy myself at school very much, but when I get home all I can think of is 'what can I do?'"

"Unhappy."

It is probably a thoughtless habit your parents have gotten into. Unhappy, and they don't realize how much they do it. Tell them some time what you have told me. They will probably be shocked to think you feel that way. As to leaving school, tell them that you will be able to earn much more money when you are old enough to go to work if you can complete your studies. I do hope they let you continue.

girl and is too fat and can't make friends. She wants to know how to reduce and how to attract. I do think it is a great disadvantage for a school girl to be too fat. Discouraged. Candy, cake and other sweets are the trouble. Do you want to get slimmer enough to give them up? You must have the foods necessary for proper growth, so drink plenty of milk, eat plenty of vegetables, also cereals and whole wheat bread in sufficient quantity, but cut out the sweets and get plenty of exercise, and see if you cannot get your weight down to normal. If you send a stamped, self-addressed envelope and 10 cents in coin I will send you a pamphlet on reducing, but you must bear in mind that it is written for adults, and that a girl of your age must be sure to get enough substantial food to keep her growing.

Why drop your friend, "Billy," unless you don't like him? I should think that for nearly all Christmas present from him you would be nice to him.

WHEN THE GHOST FLIES

"Check! T-check! You fellows can do as you like, but I am not going to hang around here any longer. I have no wish to meet with the ghost tonight, I can tell you. It is bad enough to hear his wail."

"Not that Wood Thrush and Veery and Vesper Sparrow have all said good night to me, there is no telling at what moment he may appear. I am off. Happy dreams, friends."

"Happy dreams, Blackie!" chirped the birds as their companions nauted into the air. Bob White immediately took to his wings.

"I am going to follow Blackie's example and get out of the way of the ghost. I feel bad enough about this daylight saving business without being scared to death. And as many times as I have heard him call of the winged mystery always makes me shiver."

"Me, too," agreed Flicker.

"Pooh! You young fellows are afraid of your shadows!" scoffed Sam Sparrow. "You know as well as I do that he ghost is only a bird like ourselves. Just because he flies in the night is no reason why you should run away from him."

"Sparrow is all very true Sam Sparrow, but it is not he himself, that I dislike, but his voice. It makes my feathers stand on end to hear that sad moan floating on the darkness. If you will excuse me I think I will fly home. It is time, I was there anyhow."

Flicker politely but firmly took himself off, and in spite of his brave words it was plain to be seen that Sam Sparrow didn't a bit like to be left alone. He looked this way and that and scratched one wing nervously with his claw. Then something happened that made him lose every speck of his boasted courage.

"Whip-poor-will! Whip-poor-will! Whip-poor-will!" A far off in the deep woods on the other side of the pasture sounded the long, quivering cry.

Without waiting to hear whether it was coming nearer or not Sam Sparrow gave a queer little hop into the air and flew away just as fast as his wings would take him, and Peter noticed that Sam Sparrow took good care not to venture near the woods.

Can poor Whip-poor-will be the ghost that those birds were talking about? He must be, or why should Sam Sparrow have scuttled off like that?

The very idea of any one being afraid of Whip-poor-will! He it a harmless fellow, I am sure of that. Why he doesn't make half the noise that the rest of the birds do. He has passed me in the barnyard many times an evening without a sound. I should never have guessed who it was if he hadn't stopped to rest and tell me his name of his own accord. Why in the world the birds should fear a noiseless chap like that I can't understand.

Peter was puzzled.

Next: "Unhappy Mr. Whip-poor-will."

"The cry of the winged mystery always makes me shiver," declared Bob White.

Sport Ritticisms

by BILL RITT

Fans rushed out at a French soccer match and kissed the umpire. In America this is regarded as unsanitary and impossible.

It would take a great deal of enthusiasm and an iron constitution to kiss the grizzled paws of some of our baseball arbiters. Those babies have more or less painful righten a gorilla out of a year's growth.

The fad might spread. Ball players and managers might be the next victims. One shudders to think of such a hideous sight as John McGraw and Connie Mack helplessly fleeing with 10,000 napper fans at their heels.

Embracing Babe Ruth would be a two-person job. Throwing arms around the Mammoth of Maui would be like trying to get a strange hold on Pike's peak.

The kiss system of applause must be stamped out before it starts. We can't afford to have every home run launch a kissing bee and the world series to end up in a kissing party.

Should the French method of saluting worthy athletes with a sound smack on the lips seep into the national pastime, the players will have only one recourse. The whole team can don catchers' masks.

SIX INJURED WHEN AUTO TURNS OVER

Six unidentified occupants of a closed automobile were believed to have sustained more or less painful injuries when the car upset in a ditch on the Dayton and Xenia Pike, opposite the Beavercreek school house, then burst into flames and burned up about 10 p. m. Friday.

Passengers in the car, including several women, were thrown out when the auto overturned. The driver is reported to have been seriously hurt while a woman is believed to have been rendered unconscious.

The accident victims were picked up by a passing motorist and taken to a Dayton hospital.

LAMBS COME TO THE SHEARING

Record Share Days On Exchange, Rumors Of Vast Profits, Draw Uninitiated Thousands To Stock Speculation In New York.

By CLARK KINNAIRD

NEW YORK, April 14.—Clock market speculation now is a national sport. Wall Street is as long as Main Street. In the current activity in the Street, traders from Seattle, the Bronx, Cuba, Portland, Me., Brooklyn, Lexington, Ky., Park Ave. and Limping Buffalo, Okla., are figuratively operating shoulder to shoulder. In the whirlpool are the bank accounts of millionaires, the savings of pastors, bootblacks, taxidrivers, stenographers, 10-cent-store girls, railroad engineers, music teachers, widows and reporters.

It is the last named group, the lambs, who now are paying for the big show. The last ones in the market, they are the first ones out. Hypnotized by newspaper headlines and wild chatter of successful or would-be successful speculators, they push their hoardings into the market after the professional operators have started things going and are ready to take their profit.

Some of the professionals are caught in the beginning as shorts, having sold something they didn't have, but in the end it is the lambs, the outsiders who leap into the game without knowing a thing about it, who pay the bill.

Brokers Never Lose

But the only persons in Wall Street who never lose are the brokers. They don't speculate. Many concerns require that partners and important employees make a solemn oath not to dabble in the market. The brokers get commissions for buying and selling. They have a monopoly on trade, for only members may buy and sell in the Stock Exchange, and the number of members, 1,100, is unchanging.

A seat on the Exchange now sells for from $350,000 to $400,000, but one isn't worth a dime as a place to rest. Owners of seats never get to sit down. They're on their feet in a pandemonium of activity from the time the Exchange opens, at 10 a. m., until it closes at 3 p. m.

Agitation for More Seats
The succession of 4,000,000-share days in the Exchange have caused renewal of agitation for the creation of more memberships, or the delegation of certain duties of floor members to assistants. Traders have collapsed from overwork in the activity around Post 5, where General Motors stock is auctioned, or around No. 20, the center of Radio Corporation exchanges. Theirs is a profession in which an error of word or gesture may cost thousands of dollars and upset a market.

Nevertheless, first visit to the Stock Exchange is likely to be disappointing. A visit by the way, must be arranged through a member. The visitor's gallery isn't open to all and sundry. Photographers are forbidden to make pictures during a session, but a cameraman occasionally evades the rule, working without a flashlight.

Excitement Confusing

The commotion is such that from the visitors' gallery, the uninitiated sightseer finds it difficult to tell what the excitement is about. Around twenty or twenty-five trading posts, each with its special stocks, eddy groups shout and make motions. One broker raises his hand and utters a few words, or signals with his fingers. Another, in response, raises a hand in acknowledgement. Then both make notations on a pad. A sale has been made. Stock worth thousands has changed hands.

In a fragment of a second after a deal is made, the news is being flashed by ticker in brokerage offices all over the country. Private wires link these offices with New York and the Exchange. Oakland, Cal., and Berlin, Germany, and Muscatine, Ia., buy and sell in the twinkling of an eye. Yes, Berlin. During the General Motors excitement, a number of stock market deals were made by trans-Atlantic radio phone.

DON'T PET BEES

Spring exuberance should not lead the beekeeper to disturb his hives too early in the season, with the mistaken idea that he is doing them a kindness. Any such disturbance may cause the bees to start their work too early, and expose them to danger when cold spells come later, it is pointed out by Virgil N. Arzo, extension specialist in beekeeping at the Ohio State University.

"Manipulations in the early spring are emergency measures only," says Arzo. "If the bees have been properly prepared for winter, there should not be many things to do when brood rearing starts in the spring."

"But the beekeeper will do well to visit all hives that are not well packed and lift them a little from the bottom board to determine whether they are too light in stores. Should they weigh little he should feed the bees some thick sugar syrup at once—granulated sugar, two parts, and one part of water. The water should be hot when the sugar is stirred into it, and the syrup fed to the bees at night from a friction top pail which has had the lid punched full of very fine holes. The lid is squeezed into place and the pail inverted over the hole in the honey-board or inner cover of the hive. It may be placed on two sticks, holding it an eighth of an inch above the honey-board, enabling the bees to cluster freely over the whole surface of the lid. An empty super is now placed on top of the honey board and the space inside that is not occupied by the pail is filled with some material so that the heat of the bees below the honey board is not allowed to escape."

EAGLES LEARN PLAN FOR PENSION LAW FROM ADDRESS HERE

First hand information on the new revised old age pension law for Ohio, sponsored by the Fraternal Order of Eagles, was obtained by Xenia Aerie, No. 1689, when James T. Anderson, Stark County, who has been tentatively selected to introduce the measure at the next session of the legislature, explained its provisions at the Aerie meeting Friday night.

Representative Anderson is engaged on a speaking tour during which he will address every Aerie in Ohio. He is a member of the Eagle Lodge and was chosen by the Old Age Committee of the order for the distinction of introducing the bill.

Local Eagles also heard an address by Matty Brown, Springfield, O., state secretary of the Order, who discussed the Eagle fraternity. The meeting was well attended and was arranged by the local old age pension committee composed of I. Friedman, Otto Hornick and Fred Haller.

RESERVES TO PLAY MILLARDS SUNDAY

Manager Jesse Chambliss has rounded up a great array of talent this season. Many familiar players and players not so familiar will be seen in action, including Payne, Conley, Eckert, Cyphers, Wright, Barlow, Coy, Durnbaugh and many others.

NATIONAL LOOP HAS SIX "HOPES" BROWN LEARNS

[EDITOR'S NOTE: Norman Brown, as has been his custom for many years, sizes up the National League race after the first few games have given him a line on the clubs. His predictions are not pre-season guess work, but the outcome of close observation of the clubs in training camp and in early season play.]

By NORMAN E. BROWN
Staff Writer for Central Press and The Gazette

There are two clubs in the National League that seem to be out of the running as the season starts. They are the Brooklyn Dodgers and the Phillies.

But the matter of "placing" the other six in the present race is simply a case of guess work. The Pittsburgh Pirates won the penant last season, but their margin of superiority was not enough to make them an outstanding favorite this year. Against that margin, among other things, are the obstacles of "the law of averages," and psychological disadvantage, and the apparent continued inconsistent work of the pitchers.

In favor of the Buccaneers is the acquisition of Sparky Adams and his brilliant play to date.

On out-and-out form, however, the St. Louis Cardinals seem to have the edge. They have a pitching staff—second only, perhaps (when under way), to that of the Brooklyn Dodgers. The Cards also have offensive strength.

The Chicago Cubs have good pitching, offensive strength and brilliant leadership. They lacked a "punch" last season, and face stiffer opposition this year from the Cardinals especially.

The New York Giants may well be termed the mystery club of the league. Lacking Rogers Hornsby the club has lost much of its color. One can find little, though, in the infield to criticize, surely, and the acquisition of Catcher Frank Horan, an add to the offensive strength and certainly won't weaken the catching department.

The Cincinnati Reds stand just where they have every spring for the last half dozen years. They have a great pitching staff—on paper, and a team to back up that staff.

However, Hendricks has annually faced the impossible task of getting his pitchers to "click" while overcoming minor obstacles, such as injuries, spring holdouts and inner office arguments between players and the club owners.

The Boston Braves have the greatest hitter in the National League to give them the "spark." He gives them also one of the great second basemen of the game. These two improvements alone can raise the Braves from the rut to a threatening position—at least the top of second division.

Here is one way the National League race may end—picking on present form and conditions.

For a "hunch" on the race—watch the Giants. Manager John McGraw, himself, is paying more attention to his team than he has in the last five years.

Sport Shorts

The Washington Senators' new striped hose of red, black and white make them look like animated barber poles.

Reports from Yale University say the current swimming team there is the best in Blue history.

A checker tournament will be held at Vancouver, British Columbia, during the annual exhibition there in August.

On several occasions in the National League teams have swept a season's series with another.

John L. Sullivan was a three-time favorite to win from Jim Corbett who whipped him in their title battle in 1892. The same odds prevail for Gene Tunney against Tom Heeney.

For the third time the American Olympic boxers will be in charge of Spike Webb, Navy coach.

Charlie Paddock, famous Pacific coast sprinter, has been in active competition for sixteen years.

Leonard Cahn, of Denver, Colo., may claim to be the champ sports writer. He covered fifty-five baseball games in three weeks.

Johnny Silverster, 12-year-old Brit jockey, won ten out of twenty-one races and came in second eight times.

Bill, Jr., Sets Mark

Will Rogers, Jr., son of the humorist, with two other members of Culver Military academy swimming team, set a national interscholastic record for the 500-yard medley relay race with a mark of 3:24 3-10.

SWEETHEARTS

AUTHOR OF "MY SON'S SWEETHEARTS," "CONFESSIONS OF A WIFE," ETC.

READ THIS FIRST:
Lynda Fenton has been made the private secretary of Ralph Armitage, junior partner of Armitage & Son. It is her first real job after being graduated from school. Lynda is a singularly innocent and lovely girl. Her father, a periodical druggist, has spoiled her life, because he continually tells her that her mother deserted them for a wealthier man, and that every woman has her price.

Lynda meets Emily Andrews at the office, who cherished a secret fondness for David Kenmore, Lynda's companion from childhood up. David is a salesman for Armitage. Emily plots to make things uncomfortable for Lynda.

Lynda's father, too, deserts her, and David tells her that he loves her and that if she'll wait until the first of the year he'll ask her to be his wife.

Claire Stanhope comes to make her home with Lynda. She tells of innocent love for Fred Blaque, whom she afterwards learns is a married man.

David calls to bid Lynda goodbye before leaving on a trip. He is already a bit jealous of Armitage, and when Lynda refuses financial aid he imagines her sentiments towards him have changed.

Lynda types her first letter for Ralph Armitage.

Ralph pays Lynda artful compliments and increases her salary. Claire tells Lynda it's common gossip that Ralph is interested in her, and advises Lynda to be careful.

Lynda uses lipstick, for the first time, to hide her innocence.

Lynda and Emily Andrews have been invited to June Challer's big party, and Emily comes in to entice Lynda away from her work.

Ralph's absence, to go shopping with her in preparation for the affair.

(Now Go On With The Story)

CHAPTER XXI
ENHANCEMENT FOR ENCHANTMENT

"I sometimes wonder, Lynda, whether you're as good and as innocent as you seem," Emily continued. "But whatever you do, my dear, don't try to high-hat me. Surely you're not such an idiot as to think that you are good looking."

"You are too good looking not to know that he admires you."

"Besides, you have got 'IT' as they say in Hollywood. You must have learned that by this time. I've been watching you for the last few days, darling. You stack up pretty well, but your technique is still rather faulty. I am going to enlighten you to a few things, my dear, by which you can enhance your attractiveness one hundred per cent."

"In the first place, you never use perfume, do you?"

Lynda shook her head, while she wondered what that had to do with being a successful stenographer.

SWEETHEARTS

AUTHOR OF "MY SON'S SWEETHEARTS," "CONFESSIONS OF A WIFE," ETC.

READ THIS FIRST:

Lynda Fenton has been made the private secretary of Ralph Armitage, junior partner of Armitage & Son. It is her first real job after being graduated from school. Lynda is a singularly innocent and lovely girl. Her father, a periodical drunkard, has spoiled her life, because he continually tells her that her mother deserted them for a wealthier man, and that every woman has her price.

Lynda meets Emily Andrews at the office, who cherishes a secret fondness for David Kenmore, Lynda's companion from childhood up. David is a salesman for Armitage. Emily plots to make things uncomfortable for Lynda.

Lynda's father, too, deserts her, and David tells her that he loves her and that if she'll wait until the first of the year he'll ask her to be his wife.

Claire Stanhope comes to make her home with Lynda. She tells of innocent love for Fred Blaque, whom she afterwards learns is a married man.

David calls to bid Lynda goodbye before leaving on a trip. He is already a bit jealous of Armitage, and when Lynda refuses financial aid he imagines her sentiments towards him have changed.

Lynda types her first letter for Ralph Armitage.

Ralph pays Lynda artful compliments and increases her salary. Claire tells Lynda it's common gossip that Ralph is interested in her, and advises Lynda to be careful.

Lynda uses lipstick, for the first time, to hide her innocence.

Lynda and Emily Andrews have been invited to June Challer's big party, and Emily comes in to entice Lynda away from her work, in Ralph's absence, to go shopping with her in preparation for the affair.

(Now Go On With The Story)

CHAPTER XXI
ENHANCEMENT FOR ENCHANTMENT

"I sometimes wonder, Lynda, whether you're as good and as innocent as you seem," Emily continued. "But whatever you do, my dear, don't try to high-hat me. Surely you're not such an idiot as to think that you are good looking."

"You are too good looking not to know that he admires you."

"Besides, you have got 'IT' as they say in Hollywood. You must have learned that by this time. I've been watching you for the last few days, darling. You stack up pretty well, but your technique is still rather faulty. I am going to enlighten you to a few things, my dear, by which you can enhance your attractiveness one hundred per cent."

"In the first place, you never use perfume, do you?"

Lynda shook her head, while she wondered what that had to do with being a successful stenographer.

"I never thought much about it, Emily," she said, "except once in a while I have been almost sickened by the conglomeration of smells in the outer office."

"I know it," acknowledged Emily. "There isn't one girl in twenty who knows how to use perfume properly, and let's face it, you know, good perfume is expensive; but I've noticed, dear girl, that most men are fond of a subtle fragrance hovering about any woman."

"Is that so, Emily? I thought you hated it. David has always told me so."

"What was telling you something that was not true, Angel Child. He was either lying to you or to himself. You know there is nothing in the world that men like to do more than to kid someone, and they usually begin with themselves. If I get out of perfume, I always take a little shock over my acquaintance when I shop for it. He'll buy the most expensive at the counter, and I always come away with one of those lovely perfumers as well."

"That is a nice name for it, whatever it is," interrupted Lynda.

"That is what I like to call them," explained Emily.

"A man, my dear, likes to think the girl he admires has red lips, and would not be guilty of using a lipstick," continued Emily.

"He wants to think that her bobbed hair is naturally curly, even when her permanent wave is rather frowsy, and he always tells her when his lips touch her neck, just behind her ear, that her fragrant skin entices him, denying even to himself that the elusive perfume that pleases him is made by some French perfumer, and liberally sprayed over her hair, whenever she dresses to go out."

"Every man, my dear, likes to think that he has picked out the one perfect girl in all the world. I expect that it was Claire Stanhope, who suggested you use lipstick, and having begun it, you'll have to live up to it. I bet Armi noticed it the first time when you came in this morning."

Lynda could not help smiling, a little, however.

"The first time I know he noticed it," said Emily. "Probably told you he didn't like it, but if you pay any attention to Ralph Armitage's likes and dislikes, and compare them with what he says he likes or dislikes you will see they differ from each other quite a bit; and I begin to feel a little sorry for you, if you try to follow them. Indeed, I myself, kept out of the mess, and let him see early that I didn't want to be his secretary, for I knew that any girl that Armi wanted, he is very apt to get. He has had so many, that he has come to believe he has but to stretch out his arms, and the nearest girl walks into them; in fact, June Challer said the other day that he is the man that puts 'arms' into 'Armitage'."

"Whatever you do, my dear, don't try to high-hat me."

Just then the telephone jingled, and the same impatient woman's voice that had called before

The Theater

Adolphe Menjou says it: "Kissing is the most difficult part of motion picture acting."

Earnestly he explains: "The picture actor must kiss convincingly and satisfactorily, before staring workmen and fellow actors, amid the hissing of the Kleig lights and the grinding of the camera. He must go through it in rehearsal and in actuality, usually with a director yelling at him, 'kiss her with feeling!'"

Menjou is glad that he had his strained—but not nourishing, fiancée as leading woman in recent pictures, because he was able to make his kisses sincere. Women picture-goers have been found to be particularly critical of screen kisses.

"The actor has a scale of eight notes or tones to play on in kisses."

Al Jolson, blackface comedian, appeared in Chicago with what he referred to as a "beautiful nose." He had it reconstructed to remove a blemish acquired ten years ago when the actor was sparring with Jack Dempsey. Dempsey has also had his nose beautified, but for different reasons.

ing," Menjou explains, learnedly. "There are eight different types of kisses, ranging from the loud and whiskery smack of comedy to the hesitant breathless touch of first love."

"The varieties of kisses include the heart-broken kiss of farewell, the fond kiss of true love, the butterfly kiss and the Chinese kiss. And there is, of course, the kiss on the hand, a gallant gesture, a continental touch, respectful re-

Men acting for the business interests of Xenia in soliciting subscriptions of stock for the Cincinnati, Wilmington and Xenia traction line, being projected, have so far obtained $3,000 in pledges, or three-fifths of the amount asked.

The committee in charge of the building of the proposed new First U. P. Church, has selected the Cincinnati architectural firm of Hannaford and Sons to draw up the plans.

A special election will be held in Cedarville May 16 to decide the matter of empowering the council to make a levy of three mills in addition to the ten mills allowed by law, to establish an electric light plant in the village.

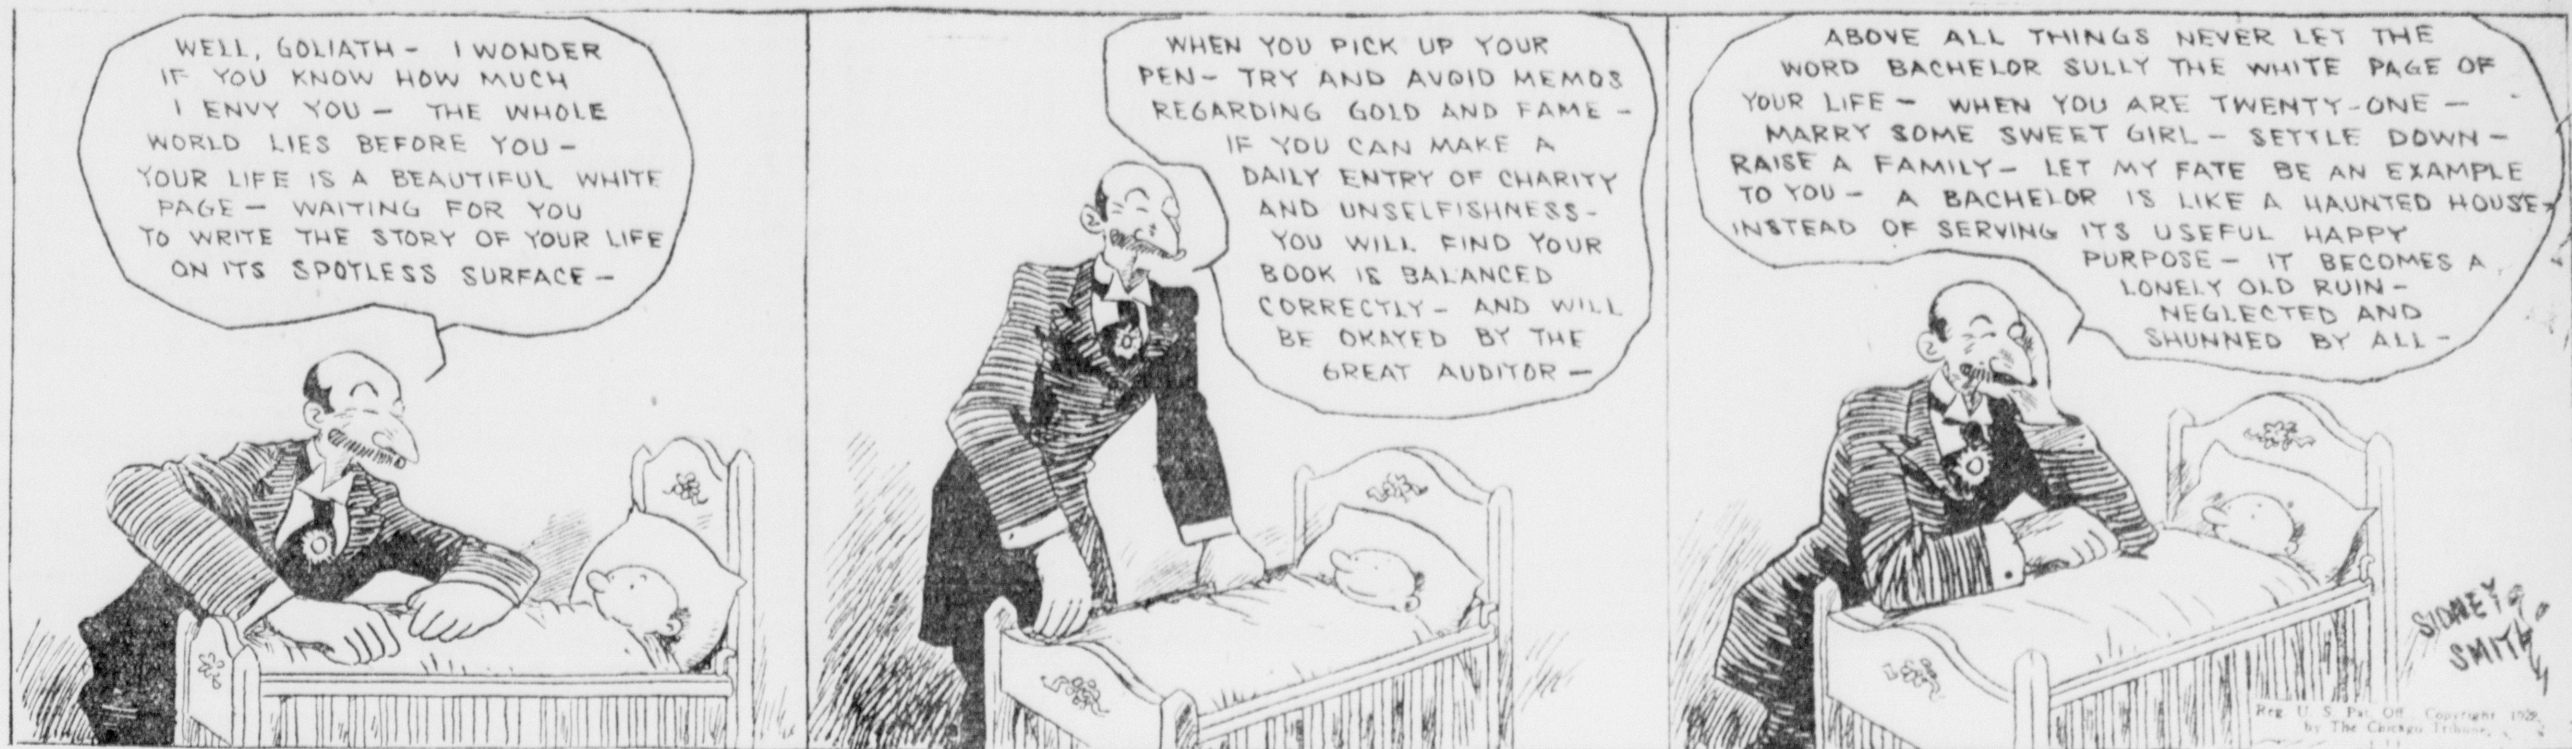

T. A. Gould, former Xenia manager of the Peoples Gas and Electric Light Co., has been made secretary and manager of the Ellis County Independent Telephone Co. at Ennis, Texas.

NEW YORK PREPARES TO WELCOME FLYERS ON ARRIVAL THERE

companions come to my home." It is expected that representatives of the German embassy, the Free State legation and the German and Free State consulates in this city will join with the mayor's official committee in welcoming the flyers when they come to New York.

German societies are planning numerous fetes.

Before leaving Bafdonnell airport Baron Von Huenefeld said he wanted to return to Germany as quickly as possible so it is likely his stay here will be brief.

BERLIN, April 14.—Official Germany and leaders throughout the country were overjoyed today at the achievement of Capt. Koehl, Baron Von Huenefeld and Commander Fitzmaurice in spanning the North Atlantic Ocean in a westward flight for the first time.

President Hindenburg telegraphed to Koehl congratulating him up on the success of his venture.

"Heartiest congratulations to the daring ocean fliers on their great success—Von Hindenburg, Reichstag president."

Transportation Minister Koeh wired Professor Junkers, designer and manufacturer of the Bremen—"The great flying triumph which Koehl achieved was made possible only through the excellence of the airplane and motor you built. Congratulations to your fellow workers."

Chancellor Marx also congratulated Koehl in the following cable:

"Heartiest congratulations to the first European fliers to succeed in flying across the ocean from east to west. Our joy is all the greater because this triumph was due to German technique and German daring. Through them Germany transmits to the American people her greetings of an expression of spiritual union and friendship."

Other leaders throughout the country hailed the flight as enhancing German prestige, courage and mechanical excellence.

WASHINGTON, April 14.—The capital was thrilled today over the safe landing of the German and Irish aviators on the little island of Gretna off the coast of Labrador, and hailed their feat of being the first to cross the North Atlantic on a westward flight, where so many have failed, as a memorable one.

The news of the aviators' safety was received at the German embassy and Irish legation with joy. Hope had never been abandoned but the relief was evident.

The German ambassador issued this statement:

"I am very happy to hear that the German plane Bremen has safely arrived on this side of the Atlantic. My greeting goes to the brave crew who mastered wind and weather and by their westward transatlantic flight, brought aviation another step nearer the goal of connecting the two continents."

are believed to have been from surrounding towns.

VICTIMS TRAPPED

The fire following the explosion trapped many persons in the flaming dance hall and their bodies were burned beyond recognition before firemen and volunteers from among the townspeople, were able to bring the flames under control at 11 o'clock this morning.

The force of the explosion caused the walls of the structure to cave in and many of the dancers were literally blown off their feet and dashed against buildings across the street.

Rescue workers were driven back from the flaming building by the intense heat of the blaze, and later were hampered when all electric lights were put out of commission.

The explosion was so sudden and the flames spread so rapidly it is feared some of the missing will be found in the debris.

Dancers were thrown into a veritable inferno before escape was possible through the doorways. Many had to brave the flames to get outside. Others on the outside worked frantically to save the trapped ones.

No one was injured in a theater in the same building as the show house had just dismissed the second crowd of the night.

All reserve nurses within fifteen miles were summoned to aid in giving treatment to those who suffered burns and injuries.

An entire block of business houses is in ruins.

least bit worn by their experiences, and appeared to take their narrow flight and its perilous ending as a matter of course.

MESSAGES BY DOGSLED

Dispatches were received here from Point Amour, Labrador, to which point they had been carried by the transatlantic plane Bremen, the barren piece of rock and ice where the fliers landed.

HALIFAX, N. S., April 14.—The transatlantic plane Bremen is slightly damaged, and its three occupants, Captain Hermann Koehl, Baron Ehrenfried Von Huenefeld and Commandant James Fitzmaurice, have escaped without injury, according to the latest word received here this morning.

The three airmen are being well cared for by the lighthouse keeper on the island, it was stated, and they want for no necessities, although their surroundings naturally afford only the barest of comfort. It is believed here that the fliers were following the great circle course, summer route of steamers to the St. Lawrence via the Straits of Belle Isle, but that they encountered head winds which exhausted their fuel supply and forced them to land on the ice bound isle.

CURTISS FIELD, N. Y., April 14.—Fraulein Herta Junkers, daughter of Dr. Hugo Junkers, manufacturer of the transatlantic monoplane Bremen and representative of her father's company in America, announced shortly after nine o'clock this morning that tentative plans to send relief to the Bremen from here by air had been definitely cancelled because of unfavorable weather conditions.

NEW WILBERFORCE BUILDING TO BE DEDICATED NEXT TUESDAY

The new home economics building of the C. N. and I. Department at Wilberforce University, erected by the state, will be formally opened and dedicated next Tuesday morning at 10:30 o'clock at exercises in the Jones Auditorium.

The following program will be carried out: Organ Prelude, Miss Grace Edwards; Spirituals, Wilberforce Glee Club; "The Occasion," an address by Superintendent R. C. Bundy; "Our Institution," an address by Bishop J. H. Jones; address, L. L. Louthian of the state department of education; address, "Home Economics," Mrs. Charlotte C. Ellis, Columbus, O.; dedication address, Dr. B. F. McWilliams, Toledo, member of the trustee board; acceptance address, G. H. Jones, president of the university. At the close of the program visitors will be extended an invitation to inspect the new building and the exhibits.

The building was constructed in two sections and by two contracts, the first story being built by the McCurran Bros. of Xenia, and the second story by R. Burton Child, contractor, Findlay. The first contract called for $32,000 for a one story building, but this was found inadequate for the school needs, and a request was made to the legislature for an additional story to the building.

The legislature of 1925 appropriated $25,000 for the additional story, which amount was increased to $30,500 by the board of control, making the total cost of the erection of the completed building, $62,500. In addition, $10,000 was allowed for equipment, which makes the total cost, including construction of the building and furnishings, $72,500.

The plumbing was done by the Spohn Plumbing Co. of Columbus and the electrical work by Beck and Co., of the same city. Extra plumbing work was done by Bocklet and King and Jordan Plumbing Co., of Xenia. Shades for the building were furnished by the Adair Furniture Co. of Xenia. The furniture for the building was furnished by the E. H. Sheldon and Co., school furniture manufacturers, Muskegon, Michigan.

The new building will go into immediate service with a full corps of instructors, offering courses that are standard and state approved. It is expected that this new unit of the university life will prove a great drawing card, and of great advantage to the institution.

The World And All

BY CHARLES B. DRISCOLL

TOILERS OF THE SEA

The sea has always held me. To sit on the beach and watch the big waves come rolling in, one after the other, tirelessly reiterating the power of the deep water, is so fascinating a fashion of idling that it is difficult for me to tear myself away.

Sea tales enthral me. Perhaps it is partly because they were the first stories I ever heard. My father had been a seafaring man, and on the Kansas prairie he was homesick for the salt water. He used to talk of the sea and of storms, and I used to listen in wonder. Now I write pirate tales, and there is none of my writing from which I derive greater satisfaction and joy.

There was a true tale of the sea in the newspapers recently, and I have seldom read a more thrilling story. When the Robert E. Lee struck a hidden reef in Cape Cod

Bay, miracles of labor were performed by those brave coast guardsmen!

Imagination pictured the great coastwise liner, portholes aglow, driving on through the storm, and the coast guardsmen ashore sending up rockets and flares to warn her that she was headed for the rocks. What tragedy! She struck, despite the warnings.

You know the story of that terrific night, during which the rescuers launched their dory again and again, and finally succeeded in getting alongside. Every passenger was saved. That was a proud record for the life-savers.

And then the return to shore began, and the little dory is overturned by an angry breaker. The tired heroes have saved a hundred and fifty lives, and all their strength is gone. They cannot save themselves. Three of them go down to death, their work well done.

That was an epic spectacle, and it should be held in the memory of the race of men for many a day. I hope there will be a beautiful monument to these Americans at Plymouth where so many of our country's heroic memories center. These boys are worthy of the soil and the sea that nurtured them.

Speaking of sea tales. There is a new book called "Ecolo," which contains three rather good stories of salt water. It is by Jacland Marmur, and is the author's first book. Though it lacks something of the qualities of greatness, it is full of the spirit of the wild sea.

NEW YORK PREPARES TO WELCOME FLYERS ON ARRIVAL THERE

companions come to my home." It is expected that representatives of the German embassy, the Free State legation and the German and Free State consulates in this city will join with the mayor's official committee in welcoming the flyers when they come to New York.

German societies are planning numerous fetes. Before leaving Baidonnel airport Baron Von Huenefeld said he wanted to return to Germany as quickly as possible so it is likely his stay here will be brief.

BERLIN, April 14.—Official Germany and leaders throughout the country were overjoyed today at the achievement of Capt. Koehl, Von Huenefeld and Commander Fitzmaurice in spanning the North Atlantic Ocean in a westward flight for the first time. President Hindenburg telegraphed to Koehl congratulating him upon the success of his venture.

Hearty congratulations to the daring ocean flyers on their great success—Von Hindenburg, Reichstag president.

Transportation Minister Koch wired Professor Junkers, designer and manufacturer of the Bremen—The great flying triumph which Koehl achieved was made possible only through the excellence of the airplane and motor you built. Congratulations to your fellow worker.

Chancellor Marx also congratulated Koehl in the following cable: "Hearty congratulations to the first European flyers to succeed in flying across the ocean from east to west. Our joy is all the greater because this triumph was due to German technique and German daring. Through them Germany transmits to the American people her greetings of an expression of spiritual union and friendship."

Other leaders throughout the country hailed the flight as enhancing German prestige, courage and mechanical excellence.

WASHINGTON, April 14.—The capital was thrilled today over the safe landing of the German and Irish aviators on the little island of Greenely off the coast of Labrador, and hailed their feat of being the first to cross the North Atlantic on a westward flight, where many have failed, as a memorable one.

The news of the aviators' safety was received at the German embassy and Irish legation with joy. Hope had never been abandoned but the relief was evident.

The German ambassador issued this statement: "I am very happy to hear that the German plane Bremen has safely arrived on this side of the Atlantic. My greeting goes to the brave crew who mastered wind and weather and by their westward transatlantic flight, brought aviation another step nearer the goal of connecting the two continents."

are believed to have been from surrounding towns.

VICTIMS TRAPPED

The fire following the explosion trapped many persons in the flaming dance hall and their bodies were burned beyond recognition before firemen and volunteers from among the townspeople, were able to bring the flames under control at 1 o'clock this morning.

The force of the explosion caused the walls of the structure to cave in and many of the dancers were literally blown off their feet and dashed against buildings across the street.

Rescue workers were driven back from the flaming building by the intense heat of the blaze, and later were hampered when all electric lights were put out of commission.

The explosion was so sudden and the flames spread so rapidly it is feared some of the missing will be found in the debris.

Dancers were thrown into a veritable inferno before escape was possible through the doorways. Many had to brave the flames to get outside. Others on the outside worked frantically to save the trapped ones.

No one was injured in a theater in the same building as the show-house had just dismissed the second crowd of the night.

All reserve nurses within fifteen miles were summoned to aid in giving treatment to those who suffered burns and injuries.

An entire block of business houses is in ruins.

William H. Vanderbilt, Jr., of Providence, R. I., will be seen at Kansas City when the Republican convention opens, having been named as delegate at large from Rhode Island.

MONOPLANE BREMEN IS FORCED DOWN ON GREENELY ISLAND

least bit worn by their experiences, and appeared to tell their hazardous flight and its precarious ending as a matter of course.

MESSAGES BY DOGSLED

Dispatches were received here from Point Amour, Labrador, to which point they had been carried by dogsled from Greenely Island, the barren piece of rock and ice where the flyers landed.

HALIFAX, N. S., April 14.—The trans-Atlantic plane Bremen is slightly damaged, and its three occupants, Captain Hermann Koehl, Baron Ehrenfried Von Huenefeld and Commandant James Fitzmaurice have escaped without injury, according to the latest word received here this morning.

The three flyers are being well cared for by the 1st house keeper on the island, it was stated, and they want for no necessity, although their surroundings naturally afford only the barest of comfort. It is believed here that the flyers were following the great circle course, summer route of steamers to the St. Lawrence via the Straits of Belle Isle, but that they encountered head winds which exhausted their fuel supply and forced them to land on the ice bound isle.

CURTISS FIELD, N. Y., April 14.—Fraulent Herta Junkers, daughter of Dr. Hugo Junkers, manufacturer of the trans-Atlantic monoplane Bremen and representative of her father's company in America, announced shortly after nine o'clock this morning that tentative plans to send relief to the Bremen from here by air had been definitely cancelled because of unfavorable weather conditions.

NEW WILBERFORCE BUILDING TO BE DEDICATED NEXT TUESDAY

The new home economics building of the C. N. and I. Department at Wilberforce University, erected by the state, will be formally opened and dedicated next Tuesday morning at 10:30 o'clock at exercises in the Jones Auditorium.

The following program will be carried out: Organ Prelude, Miss Grace Edwards; Spirituals, Wilberforce Glee Club; "The Occasion," an address by Superintendent R. C. Bundy; "Our Institution," an address by Bishop J. H. Jones; address, L. L. Louthian of the state department of education; address, "Home Economics," Mrs. Charlotte C. Ellis, Columbus, O.; dedication address, Dr. B. F. McWilliams, Toledo, member of the trustee board; acceptance address, G. H. Jones, president of the university. At the close of the program visitors will be extended an invitation to inspect the new building and the exhibits.

The building was constructed in two sections and by two contracts, the first story being built by the McCurrans Bros., of Xenia, and the second story by R. Burton Child, contractor, Findlay. The first contract called for $32,000 for a one story building, but this was found inadequate for the school needs, and a request was made to the legislature for an additional story to the building.

The legislature of 1925 appropriated $25,000 for the additional story, which amount was increased to $30,500 by the board of control, making the total cost of the erection of the completed building, $62,500. In addition, $10,000 was allowed for equipment, which makes the total cost, including construction of the building and furnishings, $72,500.

The plumbing was done by the Spohn Plumbing Co. of Columbus and the electrical work by Beck and Co., of the same city. Extra plumbing work was done by Beck and King and Jordan Plumbing Co., of Xenia. Shades for the building were furnished by the Adair Furniture Co. of Xenia. The furniture for the building was furnished by the E. H. Sheldon and Co., school furniture manufacturers, Muskegon, Michigan.

The new building will go into immediate service with a full corps of instructors, offering courses that are standard and state approved. It is expected that this new unit of the university will prove a great drawing card, and of great advantage to the institution.

The World And All
BY CHARLES B. DRISCOLL

TOILERS OF THE SEA

The sea has always held me. To sit on the beach and watch the big waves come rolling in, one after the other, tirelessly reiterating the power of the deep water, is so fascinating a fashion of idling that it is difficult for me to tear myself away.

Sea tales enthrall me. Perhaps it is partly because they were the first stories I ever heard. My father had been a seafaring man, and on the Kansas prairie he was lonely for the sea and of storms, and I used to listen in wonder. Now I write pirate tales, and there is none of my writing from which I derive greater satisfaction and joy.

There was a true tale of the sea in the newspapers recently, and I have seldom read a more thrilling story. When the Robert E. Lee struck a hidden reef in Cape Cod Bay, miracles of labor were performed by those brave coast guardsmen!

Imagination pictured the great coastwise liner, so fast, driving on through the storm, and the coast guardsmen ashore sending up rockets and flares to warn her that she was headed for the rocks. What tragedy! She struck, despite the warnings.

You know the story of that terrific night, during which the rescuers launched their dory again and again, and finally succeeded in getting alongside. Every passenger was saved. That was a proud record for the life-savers.

And then the return to shore begins, and the little dory is overturned by an angry breaker. The tired heroes have saved a hundred and fifty lives, and all their strength is gone. They cannot save themselves. Three of them go down to death, their work well done.

That was an epic spectacle, and it should be held in the memory of the race of men for many a day. I hope there will be a beautiful monument to these Americans at Plymouth where so many of our country's heroic memories center. These boys are worthy of the soil and the sea that nurtured them.

Speaking of sea tales. There is a new book called "Ecology," which contains three rather good stories of salt water. It is by Jacland Marmur, and is the author's first book. Though it lacks something of the qualities of greatness, it is full of the spirit of the wild sea.
